That's why we need "a few [more] good men/women". To change some of the stuff that is going on. I've found that most of the conversations have become "let's see how many I can work in 10 minutes" type. But if you get an older (time on the air) ham engaged in a conversation you can learn and give info at the same time. Most hams on the air and in person, are very willing to help out etc. This NG is not ham radio by any means!!!

: And I don't feel like putting up with the abuse..

So don't -- just ignore them. There's lots to do on the air. And you get to try out some of your crazy ideas too!

We had/have(?) the "OF (club) repeater" down here. Over the years they chased everyone off "their" frequency, and now most of them have died off and no one uses the machine anymore. That's what happens when one doesn't act nice and get new blood into the hobby/group.

But back to your Jim, quick before we loose him, send him an email and invite him back on 2m. That is if he hasn't meet up with a "thou shalt upgrade theyself for true deliverance" person first! ;-(

That is because the 'cb' types have just about taken over ham radio. You hear many of the cb phrases used, like "I'm qrt and on the side", and
"I'm back quite."

>>Because this is amature radio equipment, I will not ship outside USA, unless you provide proof of U.S. Amatuer Licensing!!!<<

And a U.S. license is required for shipment OUTSIDE the USA because?????

Now that AF2Y has compleated his course from the NK4D school of law he can now act as the legal expert from the Goodfelons. Just look what he did for WB2OTK, got his sorry fat ass cancelled. There was not any time for deliberation, this was aa direct verdict from the bench ands it slammed OTK and AF2Y.

What ever happened to all of the lawyers that OTK had in the family to protect him from such circumstances???? Ole Doc really had a hard time with the OTK case, first there were the foreclosures and then the shoplifting case . This OTK guy really had Doc hopping to protect himself. Doc was in sidebar with NK4D the self proclaimed attorney from Alabama. The closest thing to sidebar for NK4D was a local tavern on the side of the road next to the prison where he works,ha ha ha ha . So if any of you Doc followers need help please call a reputable lawyer and check him out prior to hiring. Go to " lawyers.com" you can find a real lawyer there.

Hello, all --

I have a Kenwood DSP-100 that I am considering selling. (Condition is excellent - electronic and cosmetic.) Got it in a package deal with my TS-850. It does a real good job of cleaning up and tailoring the transmitted SSB signal. Adds unwanted-sideband suppression! Reports say it "adds punch." Can vary SSB signal from rich "broadcast quality" to a sharp signal for pileups and contesting.

On receive, it does not do what a Timewave or NIR does, but I do leave it in line with my Timewave DSP500zx -- the signals are a little crisper with the DSP-100 in line WITH the Timewave.

It's a neat little box, but I could use the money for some other projects I'm working on. Thought I'd offer it to see if anyone was looking for one of these. If not, I'll just keep playing with it :-)

E-mail me at STEVE.W3SY@EROLS.COM if you have any questions.

Over the past 25 years, my opinion of the no-code license has changed 180 degrees. As of today, an international treaty requires some proficiency in CW for hf operations. Many countries consider 5 wpm sufficient to meet this requirement. If the FCC approves the new restructuring, that will be the norm for General Class.

I would think that eventually the international requirement for CW will be eliminated. When that happens, then the US can drop CW for hams.

As one person commented, I am in total agreement that courtesy is far more important than CW.

(BTW 90 percent of my operation is CW.)

More anti-semetism, lloyd?

You folks are not the "chosen People" anyway. Listen to David J. Smith. He says differently!
So in other words, Smith and you choose to speak for God. I'm sure God could pick better "messenger boys."

Now if you would have included the HF antenna on the rooftop, or something about working a ZC4, 4X/4Z station, these jokers wouldn't have a beef.

Tim, I remember seeing a full blown schematic of a 4-1000, 80-10 meters amp in one of the ARRL Handbooks. It was a complete build it yourself project. I have not been able to locate the exact year, but I'm sure if you call or write to the ARRL they would be able to lead you in the right direction. Just a thought. Good Luck with your project.....Gary Morse Mania version 1.6.0 has been released and is now available.

Morse Mania is a morse code tutor for the Macintosh. The software package helps you learn morse code at speeds ranging from 5 to 30 words per minute.

This version adds Farnsworth mode. In this mode, the individual dots and dashes are sent faster, but the spacing between characters is increased, so the overall speed remains the same.

Farnsworth is useful when first learning morse code, so you don't reach the "plateau" around 7 wpm, where you can't copy any faster, because you learned the individual dots and dashes that make up each character, rather than the overall sound.

Morse Mania is shareware. A fully functional copy of Morse Mania may be downloaded from the Morse Mania web site. The URL is http://www.blackcatsystems.com/software/morsemania.html

I wish you and others would stop your sanctimonious bullsnot about Riley infringing our Constitutional guarantees. Ham radio is a national RESOURCE and an entity within itself. It must be respected and are you telling me the Liberty Net does it? Answer this Oris-how would you feel if you were a man of color and a ham radio operator who has a family and is working hard to educate his kids and minds his own business and wants what all of us want-life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness and on Saturday nights especially while generally on weeknights he has to hear his race badgered insulted, dehumanized and ostracized by white trash? They can deny me life. liberty and the pursuit of happiness etc." Oris, you know damn well if the shoe was on the other foot you'd scream bloody murder to Riley. But the oddest thing is that from time to time I do hear AfroAmerican nets and NEVER do I hear complaints from them about the 75 meter garbage and the flag wavers who support them. And how about Americans like I who are white and are targets of those LibNet bastards? What say about Jewish ham ops? You think it's right to allow, for example, a bunch of thugs to control a frequency to create a platform for an ignornant anti-Semitic drink like Walter Miller, W2YEE, to get on and run down me and mine? You think these bums should have a right PUBLICLY deny or trivialize the Holocaust on a medium which is heard worldwide? They want to preach that kind of crap, let them go to the Internet and have a ball. You have it all wrong, Oris. The protected right to hate should NOT apply to the medium of ham radio because it ruins it and I give Riley credit for recognizing it and implementing the rules to save it. The sooner that Liberty Net is decapitated the healthier ham radio becomes.

CHI-ROCKET DAN is weeping because his old pal in jamming the ham bands has been chopped down to size. I actually do not think that Dan will be doing any more of those," I WANT TO KILL YOU" routines on ham raduio for a while. If anyone hears HOBO DAN shout those threats over the air will they please

If you can't find that one, Mouser 800-346-6873, has 49.860 xtals you could re-crystal both units and it should work fine. Might need a tweak on the coil :) they're only a buck 29 each.

Ham radio is no different than life. There are rich and poor, the educated and the ignorant. A pluralism exists, and stereotyping the hobby by the actions of one or a grou is sheer folly. Ham radio has been there in the good times and bad, in the monuments to history and in its debacles. It is a print from life and as society changes, so does the hobby. Take the high road and help build it!

I have a ICOM 740 HF moblie that I would like to sale or trade. I'll take 300.00 cash plus shipping thats about 25.00 give or take. I trade it for a Pentium 233 socket 7(I will considerany other intell pentium computers above 120 Mhz) with at least 2 gig hard drive and 32 megs of ram, 56K V.90 modem,(Iwill consider 33.6 and 1 gig harddrive) Keyboard mouse and 13in svga monitor. Or I will take a 2-meter all mode base rig digital readout. Tell me what you have to offer for this HF rig.
The ICOM 740 is the stock IC-740 it has no power supply it runs strickly 12 volts DC. The rig is in good clean shape and I don't smoke and the guy that had it before me doesn't smoke. I was the third owner. I ran the rig in the moblie. The rig covers all the ham bands. It doesn't have a continous coverage receiver.The rig has both sidebands CW and RTTY as far as modes. Its demensions are 111mm (H) x 286mm (W) x 374mm (D). Its rated at 200 watts input. I will include stock mic and instruction manual.
Drope me a line and make offer

Nope but I heard Sid the Lid and his boy wonder Tim on the sacred frequency this evening. It was quite amazing. One has to wonder how someone as stupid as Sid remembers to breathe.

Sid was pontificating about how the Polynesians ought to nuke the UN troops. I suppose he meant Indoesians but what the heck. All the while Timmie was saying yes Massa Sid. What a couple of loosers. It's hard to figure out which one is dumber the idiot or he who follows an idiot blindly.

Word on the street is that we won't have Sid to kick around much longer but Timmie is young perhaps he will loose interest without his master we can only hope.

I learned a bit more about old Timmie recently youall might find interesting. It seems that Timmie was a SWL back when Sid owned 3950 and he got his panties in a knot when the Liberty Gang would show up. So Timmie studied and got his HF license so he could jam and harass this new bunch. I guess it takes all kinds but jeez does we have to have this kind?

You, with your shortwave receiver, were in a position to hear all three

Welcome to the Auxiliary Communications Service Newsletter, developed by the ACS Training Unit of the State of California Governor's Office of Emergency Services. Please visit our ACS Home Page at http://acs.oes.ca.gov

The purpose of this weekly newsletter is to bring those of us in emergency communications closer together by sharing common ideas, and by introducing new technology into the emergency services community. All individuals with an interest in emergency communications, disaster preparedness or helping the community at large are encouraged to participate here in an open forum.

You will find a virtual community here, with representatives from many different organizations with the same common goal: emergency response. We encourage everyone, from whatever organization you represent (or just yourself!) to bring us your ideas, suggestions, concerns, manuals, handbooks, or opinions so that we may share them with the group. To those of you who have just joined us, welcome aboard!

(Hi, Carol: Thanks for the very good question. Without knowing a little more about your specific situation, let me give you some general comments.

First, make sure that your class has the knowledge and approval of the agencies you serve. Some classes, such as the Incident Command System and SEMS, can be self-paced and/or self-taught. Second, stay within the published guidelines. Have documentation to show that what you are teaching conforms to established principles and protocols. Third, make it relevant. Teaching basic electronic theory to pass an Amateur Radio exam is one thing; teaching CPR based on a class you took a while back can put you in a bad way if your student makes a mistake during treatment. This is one of the reasons that we encourage all EMCOMM organizations to work WITH the organizations they serve. Discuss your Training Program with your agency's representative. - Dave Larton)

HAM RADIO PROVIDING POST-EARTHQUAKE COMMUNICATION LINKS

Within the first hour of the devastating earthquake August 17 in Turkey, members of the Amateur Radio Emergency Service organized by TRAC, the Turkish Amateur Radio Society, began providing emergency communication. "The first three days following the quake all communication needs were met by radio amateurs," TRAC Secretary Yuksel Hak, TA1BY, reported this week. Hak said telephone and other communication networks had collapsed, either due to power failures or from too much traffic.

The quake in Western Turkey lasted 48 seconds and measured 7.4 on the Richter scale. The death toll to date is 13,000, but it's expected to rise much higher. The earthquake also affected a very large area involving several provinces and towns.

Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit told CNN that rescue and recovery efforts were hampered by lost communications and limited transportation. "Telecommunications were completely cut off for at least two days in the three provinces which are badly hit," the prime minister said.

Hak said local ARES branches in provinces in the disaster area used both HF and VHF to provide or assist with continuous communication between local crisis desks and the capital city of Ankara. TRAC's Hakan Guner, TA2LJ, said hams used HF mobiles during the initial response, then established local communication by setting up a few VHF repeaters. Guner also cited an urgent need for additional equipment, especially VHF and UHF hand-helds and mobile gear.

Hak said the common frequencies used by ham radio also helped to tie together the incompatible radio systems used by various governmental organizations. "TV networks, daily newspapers and magazines all appreciated the support given by the hams," he said. "This proved the important role of Amateur Radio service in case of disasters."

In the US, the Salvation Army's SATERN is continuing its Amateur Radio efforts to assist in the wake of the earthquake disaster, despite poor propagation to that part of the world and a lack of Turkish stations. The Salvation Army says the SATERN net will continue daily at 1400 UTC on 14.265 MHz in conjunction with various efforts via the Internet.

EMC199 Battery Thoughts 2/2 Release 8/30/99

"There are many possible sources of battery power. A flashlight, tape recorder, or other battery-holding piece of equipment may be modifiable to provide power. This has the added benefit of having equipment that does double duty. Broken equipment may provide the parts for a power supply..... W6WWW modified a broken electric drill handle to provide an ICOM HT with 9.6 volts from a Makita rechargable battery, while I to get power from a modified Maglite.

There is also the time honored method of building from scratch. Battery holders comes in different shapes and sizes. An eight cell AA holder makes a very compact 12 volt supply using alkalines, a ten cell AA holder is available for making 12 volts with Nickel based batteries.

Consider how to power each item of equipment based upon how you will likely be operating. A Shadow has different needs than a Mobile OR Portable station. Also consider the battery needs for personal pagers, test equipment, hearing aids, etc.

Consider the range of power each piece of equipment will tolerate. Some RF power amps shut down at about 10 volts, some will continue at lower total output when input voltage drops as low as 6 volts. An ICOM 706 mobile that I use will distort audio when powered from a car outlet if the engine is off.

In an emergency, supplies may consist of what you have 'in-hand'. When caught with limited power resources consider these aspects:

1. Keep the cell phone off and use a radio or pager to alert you when someone wishes to call in to you. Most cell phones will still transmit covertly while in standby. This is the reason they are banned in some RF sensitive environments.

2. When using packet or other forms of digital communications that require a computer having limited operational time, use a packet MAIL indicator, paging, or voice contact, to determine when the computer needs to be activated.

3. Use the minimum amount of RF power that is reasonable, perhaps even relaying through a station that is not strapped for power.

4. Use a HT rather than a mobile to monitor. The mobile can be activated for actual contact if the HT is not strong enough.

5. Be conscious of keeping transmissions short. Rather than saying the message at handwriting speed, use bursts of 3 words then drop carrier while the receiving station is writing it down. This is good practice in any event as it has the added benefit of giving more room for emergency break-in.

6. Audio uses power. Lower the volume and/or use earphones.

7. For low light conditions, LEDs can be used for lighting. A two cell mini MagLite will operate continuously for days if the bulb is replaced with a small high efficiency LED. A new "white" LED (blue tint) is available that makes the high efficiency yellow look dim.

8. Let others know of your needs. There may be a mobile passing through that is carrying more than enough power to share."

This issue of the Newsletter marks the issuance of EMCOMM Bulletin #200. Since our weekly RACES Bulletins were changed in April of 1996 to an Emergency Communications (EMCOMM) format, to better reflect that the bulletins have value to many emergency serv ices organizations, and not just to RACES members, we've seen an explosion of information, communication and cooperation between all facets of the emergency community. Regardless of the logo on the ID card or the patch on the uniform, people are talking to each other. During disasters across the country, I have seen people from former rival agencies and organizations standing shoulder to shoulder and getting the job done. We've come a long way, but we have a long way yet to go. I'd like to think that these last 200 bulletins have helped in that effort. With thanks to the State ACS Training and Education Unit, and to State ACS Officer Cary Mangum for agreeing to the EMCOMM idea in the first place, I hope that all of you enjoy the next 200 EMCOMM Bul letins as much as we have had bringing them to you. ...And keep those emails coming!

We'd appreciate hearing from those EMCOMM units that have participated in the recent fires in the West, or with Hurricane Dennis in the East. Write up a few paragraphs on what you and organization did, and we'll publish it here for all to learn and enjoy!

HAMS ACTIVE AS CALIFORNIA WILDFIRES BLAZE

Hams are helping to provide much-needed communication as hundreds of fires raged in 16 Northern California counties. Sacramento Valley SEC Jerry Boyd, K6BZ, reports that amateurs are assisting the California Division of Forestry/Fire Protection with a variety of communication in the affected counties. Chief fire officers are being "shadowed" by hams to insure they have communications capabilities. Fire emergency command and control centers are using amateurs, as are evacuation centers in several jurisdictions.

As of earlier this week, Boyd said major activity was concentrated on two fires--the High Fire north of Shasta Lake and the Mammoth Fire west of Shasta Lake. More than 2200 state, local, and federal firefighters were deployed. In addition to assisting CDF, hams also are assisting the US Forest Service, since some of the fires are in National Forest territory.

Northern California experienced a series of wildland fires in early July, and residents there had hoped that would be it for the season. "Unfortunately, that was not to be the case," Boyd said. In late August, a series of thunderstorms passed through Northern California from just north of Sacramento to the Oregon border. The thunderstorms produced lots of "dry lightning" with numerous ground strikes and no rain to stop the fires the lightning started. Southern California and other western states have experienced similar problems.--thanks to Jerry Boyd, K6BZ

President Orders Emergency Aid For California Fires

Washington September 1, 1999 -- The head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) reported today that President Clinton has ordered federal emergency aid for California because of the extreme threat to populated areas posed by the recent outbreak of wildfires in the northern part of the state.

FEMA Director James Lee Witt said the President took the action this afternoon after the agency reported that four major fire complexes that started August 24 were endangering life and property in the counties of Butte, Shasta, Tehama and Tuolumne. More than 100,000 acres of land across the state have been consumed by up to 130 fires since late last week, according to the state's request for federal aid.

Witt said the President's emergency declaration authorizes FEMA to pay the state and affected local governments in the four counties 75 percent of the approved cost for emergency measures needed to save lives, protect property, and insure public health and safety. The funding also will cover part of the cost for the removal of fire debris that poses a public health and safety hazard.

Witt, who designated the counties eligible for the assistance following the declaration, indicated that assessments of fire threats in other areas are continuing and additional designations may be made later as the situation warrants.

Mark Ghilarducci of FEMA was named by Witt to coordinate federal relief efforts in the threatened areas.

EMC200 Leadership 1a
To: Emergency Communications Units - Information Bulletin
To: Emergency Management Agencies via Internet and Radio
By: Auxiliary Communications Service (ACS) of the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services

EMC200 Leadership 1a For release 9/6/99

Working with Volunteers -Leadership 1a-

Emergency Communications unit participants expect leadership and a sense of mission from the agency they support. They also require involvement that meets that mission. Failing that, they will take their talents elsewhere.

The greatest asset an agency can have is a dedicated group of volunteers. They often accomplish miracles that paid staff will not achieve because they are motivated by a totally different perspective. (this is not to criticize paid staff, but point out a distinction.)

There is a reason that occurs. It happens in agencies where there is a leader with the requisite sense of purpose, and who understands its relationship to the volunteers. That, in turn leads to committed and active involvement from the volunteers.

At a meeting of Emergency Communications Unit (EMCOMM) officials for a government agency, the topic of "mission" came up when a unit leader said "let's talk about the units mission. My volunteers have lost their sense of mission - what it means to be a part of their unit with this agency."

Subsequent discussion listed these aspects:
1. Active involvement with a purpose
2. That the purpose make sense
3. Both involvement and purpose must relate to the mission of the unit and the agency
4. Participants need and expect leadership from two (2) levels:

a. Appointed (not elected) from within their unit
b. By their agency coordinator from the paid staff

Popularity is not a requisite. A unit leader doesn't need to be popular in the sense of one who might be elected by the unit. Rather a unit leader needs a strong sense of purpose and the ability to involve people, both from the agency and the unit.

The agency coordinator must learn to take the time to give unit participants his/or her own leadership; and, to provide a qualified volunteer leader who has an innate ability to find a role that is meaningful for each unit participant.

The key is 'meaningful' - the assignment must have a useful and needed purpose that relates to THEIR purpose in working for the unit (and the agency that supports the unit.)

In other words, if you are going to use volunteers you need to know the price of leadership. It has been said that "you do not create a sense of mission with exercises and drills, but with involvement." What is meant is involvement that finds out the skills and talents of each participant and puts them to tasks they can manage; tasks that interest them, and for which they have the skills, even if they themselves do not yet recognize they possess those very skills/talents.

Leadership that allows mistakes is much more effective than one that is horrified at the thought someone might make a mistake.

So, the axiom is true: Leadership has it's price. But it IS worth it!

6524. Humiliated newcomers turned repeater jammers? (was: Re: "First personal here is")

Here's another thing to think about: how many would-be new hams have been ailienated like this, only to later extract their revenge by causing problems on the bands?

It works like this: a new ham goes out and purchases amateur radio equipment. He/she is anxious to pursue this new hobby and make new friends. But instead, he encounters a "Radio Cop" or "Repeater God" who insults him and makes him feel less than adequate. As a result, he decides not to become a ham after all.

What you have now is someone with a chip on their shoulder against ham radio and some nice, new equipment that is collecting dust. Rather than let the new gear go to waste, he decides to use it to "get even" with those who publicly humilliated him.

Specifically, how many repeater jammers started out as well-meaning hams who were never given a fair chance? Think about it: it doesn't make sense that someone would spend a few hundred dollars on an HT just to cause mayhem on the bands. But if someone already had the equipment, now with no legitimate use for it and with an axe to grind, it sure seems reasonable that they might behave this way.

Be nice to newcomers! The ridiculed newcomer of today may well become your local repeater jammer and autopatch 9-1-1 dialer of tomorrow.

Note: this address does not accept unsolicited e-mail. Please contain all discussion regarding USENET posts to the appropriate newsgroup thread.

I hate my mother-in-law. She is a snoopy selfish bitch who has finally layed the last straw. She will be here at the house tomorrow and I want to leave a disk in a stratigic location where I know she will see it and I want to put a label on it that says soething like ,"vital info", so she will grab it and try to view it. I would like to have the disk infected with the worst virus I can find. Does anyone have something, and how do I get it onto disk for her without infectiong my machine? Please time is of the essence.

.The top 10 questions that KK7HO fears the most.
1. How many folks in this newsgroup wish that KK7HO, Tim Voltz of Las Vegas, Nevada would just go away?
2. How many people think this guy is an anal rententive suckbutt to K5BLB.
3. How many people think this guy hates and hates-and posts and posts--sort of a hatefull, postcrazy Energizer Bunny.
4. How many people think this guy has no life except for his beloved only by himself attacks on the Liberty Net?
5. How many people think this guy has not had a date in over 20 years?
6. How long before Tim will realize that no one give a damn about his stupid web site?
7. How much time does Tim spend making up web sites that no one cares about?
8. Why does Tim think his 3950 oppinion poll web site is so important?
9. Why is it that KK7HO only attacks the Liberty Net and yet thinks the jamming by K5BLB, K5ZU and all the other K5BLB Sidkophants is ok?
10. And Finally----When will KK7HO realize that the world does not revolve around him and his stupid 3950 opinion poll web site?

Inquisitive people just want to know.

Hi,

I just downloaded the Kenwood memory bank control software, and found that I need a special cable to connect the rig with the PC.

As I don't see any mention of this cable in the rig user manual, can anyone tell me where the cable must be connected and its pinout?

People may not agree on the code/no-code issue; you can't expect them to.
Heck, my wife and I don't agree on everything! :-) But it's just silly

I recently received my tech license and plan on upgrading. My wife says I am wasting my time that all those people Hams that is are lowlifes.
Well having been in ham radio now for awhile I can see some of her thoughts but not some others. She told me not to have them call the house or dont turn on the radio on 2 meters if our kids are in the car. She wants to know how come none of these people work. We recently got back from vacation and along the way stopped in a restaurant occupied by a bunch of hams with their hats and call letters on it. She said she was going to puke. I am thinking about getting out of the hobby I thought the people in ham radio were higher class. One side of me says get out the other side says stay.
Any advice on how to convince my wife that some of these folks maintain real jobs and wear clean underwear

Hi Steve,

Your observation on how the DSP-100 compares with other outboard DSP units is absolutely correct. It was not Kenwood's intention to address the same problems that NIR and Timewave do. On the other hand, NIR and Timewave do nothing towards generating a quality SSB signal... which is the main function of the DSP-100.

Kenwood did a fantastically lousy job in communicating either the virtues or the limitations of this unit!

Try a spray called TUNER CLEANER - available at RS and probably

This is the new way that the jammers and their alternate screen names respond to the facts when presented with irrefutable evidence. Kc8jbo, a pseudo internet detective, attempts to shift the issue. He'd like this discussion to center on the identity of the poster, and not the substance of the post. Nice try, but it won't work.

This is the web page that KK7HO keeps peddling as 'proof' that the Liberty Net is a bad thing. This page of 'proof' is authored by a wacko college professor, who can't get a real job. So he peddles the extreeme left point of view, for morons like KK7HO to salivate over.

But if KK7HO regards the Liberty Net, and the Boy Scouts as equal "hate groups" then I guess that tells us who KK7HO really is. A confused ultra-leftist that is full of hate.

More pure fantasy by the guru of jammers, Tim Volz, KK7HO. This is one of three tactics used by Volz, the (1) "Role Reversal" tactic. This is where he attempts to confuse the issue, by accusing the victims of his crimes with his own tactics.

The others are (2) divert the issue by shifting the topic to the identity of the poster. (3) When cornered with evidence, Volz just calls it "Lies", and refuses to address the specific facts.

An example of number 3, is his recent claim of his daughter mass-emailing the Liberty Net members with a pornographic message. He refuses to address this issue, but instead calls it "Lies". Even though it was he that stated this on the air 2 weeks ago.

This group is rife with examples of #2. Just read any thread that contains KK7HO in the title. You'll see Volz babbling about screen names as a diversion from the facts of the post.

Unless you have references for any statement it should be regarded as opinion, including this one! As I said in an other screen name

Sorry Jeff that is not me who said that (are you using that rotten Netscape news reader? I was for a while and it gave me the wrong info on who posted what so I quit using it and came to Deja)

Officially I know better than to say 'no one uses CW anymore' just listen to any repeater it either identifies in CW or uses CW as the backup when someone is talking during the ID.

And I would never say 'new hams are not interested in CW' as I have been a ham now for about one year and I'm interested in CW and am trying to learn it. (with poor results I might add) Doesn't that qualify me as a new ham with CW interest?

This started when I found a post sending people to this place that makes polls for you and I thought I would give it a try.
I do have a 'real' web site and thought I would try it on the BS one first. I like how the polling works and will use it but since there is so much name calling on this NG and so much code rules vs nocode rules arguing I thought I would use the poll to put it to a 'vote' on which the NG users wanted. When I checked this morning the procoders were in the lead by 2%. So in truth the unoffical voting is split right down the middle. That's what seems to keep a good fight going!

Soon the NoCode screen name is not going to be here anymore.
I'm getting tired of it so I will soon drop it and go to something else maybe even my real call sign and name. But I doubt it!!!!!!

I thought that I would drop you a line to inform you that Mr. James V. Obrien III is suspected of causing willful interference on several occasions on 3.950Mhz. However I have no proof of this right now. Have you taken' a personnel stand against W1WCR and allowed Mr. Obrien to continue causing interference on this frequency? Riley on several occasions I have stopped by that frequency and some of the interference has stopped when I have checked in just to say hello and listen in disbelief to some of the topics these guys come up with. (Some of it is funny like the one about the government destroying our food with drugs. Did you here that one? GOD! But they are old guys with nothing better to do than sit on their butts and yak I see no harm.) I believe this sudden stopping of interference is due to my location. I am only 75 to 80 miles east of Mr. Obrien's location have seen it posted in the rec.radio.amatuer.misc that he has been one of the people involved. I have no proof of this but I find it highly suspicious that it stops when I check in to say hello. This behavior on 3.950 has been going on for sometime now and has only gotten worse with your campaign against the so called Liberty Net. I hope that you are practicing principles before personalities. Believe me I take what most of what these guys say worth a grain of salt. Most people in radio do to. That still doesn't give ANYONE the right to interfere with on going communications. I thought that I would bring this matter to your attention. Wouldn't it show the amateur community that you have no favorites and you mean business by busting these guys that cause interference on 3.950 Mhz, and that includes the guys interfering with on going communications with the so called Liberty Net?

What a truthful message from you about the amateur radio activities of "Attorney at law" AF2Y, graduate of the "NK4D law and prison radio repair school" He helped "PORKBUTT" WB2OTK right on out of ham radio. Porkbutt should have listened to sane people, but he listened to "Barrister" Swartzbard, a real screwball but like you said the shoplifting and foreclosure and the other shady acts were hard to defend. Where the radio repairman/pot likker fake lawyer NK4D was in Porkies hours of need is anyones guess. I don't know what happened to all the lawyers in Porkbutts family. Seems they evaporated with the early morning dew in South Carolina along with that three million dollars he said he had.. Now all you internet "detectives" out there don't get bent out of shape because we are telling the truth about your "heros". This all happened on the hambands and qualifies for ham radio etc. And the FCC has no jurisdiction on this forum as far as content. Don't you know. So knock your selfs out..

Perhaps because the seller is afraid of exporting radio gear that might be illegal in another country. Some countries only allow 144 to 146 mhz to be used for the amateur 2 meter band, and some don't permit DTMF tone pads, as radio phone patches are a threat to government-owned phone monopolies.

So his statement seems reasonable to me. If a US ham living abroad were to import US radio gear, he'd be likely to know the laws of the country he's living in.

Contact an organization called "Morse Outreach 2000". They're on the web at http://www.uwec.edu/Academic/Outreach/Morse2000/morse2000.html.

The Morse 2000 Worldwide Outreach promotes research in and use of Morse Code in rehabilitation and education.

It is a collaborative effort of the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire School of Nursing/Human Sciences & Services Outreach, the Johns Hopkins University Center for Technology in Education, and the Trace Research and Development Center at UW-Madison.

They have many tools for doing exactly what you want to do. Good luck

There are a number of "secondary" functions that you access by holding the function button until you get a double beep. I can't recall all (as I just sold the radio), but here's a couple I remember.

F (1 sec) then VFO: Changes scan mode from 5-second pause on an active channel to pausing until activity ceases.

(I think) F (1 sec) then MR will skip the displayed memory during scan. (it puts a star or removes the decimal point...I can't recall which).

Also, there are three scan modes. When you are on a VHF (or UHF) memory channel, pressing the MR (or UP or DOWN on mic) for more than one second will start scanning THAT band. After starting scanning, press the BAND button and it will scan all memory channels on both bands. Another handy scan feature scans between one VHF and one UHF channel. Set the radio on the VHF memory (or VFO) frequency, then set it on the UHF frequency. Press and hold the BAND button for more than one second and it will scan between those two frequencies.

You can band scan by pressing and holding the VFO button until scan begins. Alternately, you can press and hold the UP or DOWN button on the mic when the radio is in VFO mode.

Note that scanning is rather slow.

The Duplex button allows you to listen on one band while transmitting on the other. I never found it too useful, but it can be used for cross band repeat (see below).

The radio can be modified for extended transmit (If not already done). Open the top (with speaker...I think) and you'll see a loop of green wire coming from the area of the front panel. Clip it to enable it.

THere is also a cross-band repeat feature that requires a mod. The mod (and the above one) is on QRZ.com.

Nice radio!! BTW: I seem to recall that it did have PL decode as well as encode. Could be wrong here!

email if you have any other questions.

Which just shows that anyone, even the riff-raff, can learn code at 13wpm.
But it's the folks who continue to use it after they've learned it which tend to be the most courteous.

Hello !

What exactly are QTC's ? I've seen that DX stations can send QTCs to european station during the WAEDC - Contest, for example. How do i usually send a QTC in a contest and what are they for ?
I never took part in a contest where you need QTCs, so any help would be appreciated.

Bill, there was no 1924 conference. For that early era, there were:

*Berlin, 1903 and 1906
*London, 1912
*London, 1914

Because of WWI, the scheduled 1917 conference was never held.
Post WWI conferences began with:

*Washington, 1927
*Madrid, 1932
*Cairo, 1938

After WWII, conferences continued with:

*Atlantic City, 1947
*Geneva, 1959 (at which spark [class B] transmissions were to be outlawed January 1, 1966)

What is it you need to know?

Version 2 completed. Major surgery performed so big leap from 1.00 to 2.00
Now works with ICOM PCR1000 and Yaesu FT920 (with antenna switching). Free for non commercial use. Feedback REQUIRED !!! As discussed on yaesu reflector, this type of program is no use in detecting dx on crowded bands BUT if you want to know if 6mtrs is really dead then this will tell you. If you are using version 1 then please uninstall it. Requires PC with win95 or above to run. Only connection from rig is serial port line. I do not use a sound card or safety net.

Also remember that the DSP-100 came out around, what, 1992 or so. There really was not a whole lot happening in the ham market in DSP yet. Remember the so-called DSP in the original Kenwood TS-950SD?

I have to chuckle when some of our ham brethren rant about how useless the DSP-100 is compared to a Timewave, etc. I just say, "Well, DUH...." That's why I want to be real clear about what the DSP-100 does and does not do. Yes, it's a misunderstood piece of gear..

Burt, Mentor that you are, folks expect you to comprehend that ham radio of today is not the ham radio of yesteryear.

I was there in 1952, a fresh visionary kid of 13, tapping away on my homebrew 6L6. Being a ham radio operator then was to walk in rarified air. When we picked up our car mics and heard those dynamotors rev, we felt that we were special. And we were.

We presaged cell phones and satellites. Anyone who wanted to get of a view of cutting-edge technology sought out a ham station. We were curiosities in newpapers, on radio, and on the new medium, TV.

With the onset of the computer revolution, ham radio's influence waned. Then too, society stirred with trouble, which has been tracked step by step by this microcosm called ham radio.

As numbers grew and the FCC was trimmed, no longer did hams fear that pink slip in the mail. Indeed, indicative of our iconoclastic times, some hams have challenged the FCC's basic authority to regulate.

Burt, there is no question that ham radio has moved in locked step with society. In my view, to take a contrary position is akin to contesting global warming.

attorney general. She is a snoopy selfish bitch who has finally laid the last straw. She will be here at the house tomorrow and I want to leave a disk in a strategic location where I know she will see it and I want to put a label on it that says something like ,"Waco vital info", so she will grab it and try to view it. I would like to have the disk infected with the worst virus I can find. Does anyone have something, and how do I get it onto her without infecting my machine? Please time is of the essence and the CO at Fort Dietrick refuses to help me.

All you have to do Oris is block the e-mail address in your browser. I agree with Doc on a few of those points, like the platform to spread their crap, it should,nt be amateur radio. What they are doing is broadcasting/programming. I do have to give you credit for not believing the trash/propaganda that they (the Libnet gang) put out. Also I don't agree with the jamming although I can understand it , somewhat, and they'll probably attack me again for saying this but the jamming is just an expression of OUTRAGE at that "So Called" net. It should not be happening but it is, and probably will as long as they are. Riley is the one that needs to do something about the net.

Oris, when the hell are you going to stop with this, "AF2Y got named in something about willful interference?" You're talking through your can and you know it. Never once in 30 years of hamming did I ever receive any ONV or NAL for jamming and once again, you know that too. Never did I receive a warning latter from Riley. Once upon a time Oris, you were a heck of a nice guy. After your run- in with Rich, you weren't content to keep your argument with him on a one to one,but instead lashed out at anyone with whom he was friendly, and that includes me. Your problem is that you can't keep things in perspective which also explains your bizarre attitude towards the "Liberty Net." Come one Oris, I know you can't stand them too so why the heck are you protecting their "right" to practice intolerance and government hatred on ham radio. Do you hate Washington, D.C. or just the Clinton administration?If it's the latter, in Nov. 2000 you won't have to worry about Bill anymore. He'll be out making tens of millions of buckaroos on his memoirs. No president will ever have had a more fulfilling eight years in more ways than one. Getting back to the LibNet, I wish you would stop saying I'm in favor of jamming them. Oris, I don't have a 75 meter antenna up but if I did you can sure bet that I wouldn't make a sound on 3.950 unless identified. Furthermore I deplore anyone coming on the Nazi net to jam them in any way whatsoever. If one wants to dissent, then that's not jamming but to play music or create white noise or anything else is WRONG. Also I question anyone who gets on and argues with them because leopards can't change their spots and skunks can never spray anything than liquid STINK. It's a complete waste of time and energy trying to convince those clowns that(1)they're very very anti-American(2)George Washington and the founding fathers did not wear swastika armbands(3)they're a disgrace to amateur radio. I say leave the pestilence stew in their own gravy and watch Riley take them out the same way he took out the mighty K1MAN. Oris, there's nothing stopping you from getting on a street corner in your city and talking down Clinton, the FBI, ATF, Blacks if so inclined, Jews if so inclined, and so forth and so on. YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO DO IT because you are being heard in that same country which granted you those rights. But when one gets on ham radio in America and gives us a black eye as does the Lib Net,with their stupid bigoted rotten speech, they gotta go and they will.

What a moronic statement." How many times does Riley have to tell us this?"----Who the helll is Riley to tell us anything. He's a Clinton suckbutt who does the bidding of the perveyors of Political Corectness. He does not even know the commincations act of 1933 forbids the FCC from censoring anything on the air. They just do not have the power.
And do not forget that Riley is the man responsible for your good buddy OTK no longer being on the air. I bet you don';t agree with Riley on that. Or do You?
After all this is the great Riley--the man who knows all and all the hams bow down before him in awe.

>Riley does NOT appreciate the net >because he says that it's out to create problems, brags about hating this >government

Oh so Riley says--sort of like Simon says.
Riley says that the Liberty net this---and the Liberty Net that.
The Liberty Net is not out to create problems--except for corrupt illegal actions by this government. Like it or not--this is the basis of the first amendment---and our country as a whole. If you do not like it--then I suggest you leave right now--. And a Jewish Nazi like you who supports supression of free speech is creating problems on the Net--by supporting and encouraging jamming--which by the way is also a felony.

>The Liberty Net does absolutely NOTHING for the image of the U.S.A. on >amateur >radio. It DETRACTS from it.

The image of the USA is being destroyed not by the Liberty Net--but by the people in the government who have policies of bombing asperin factories--or killing innocent children at WACO. To think that a insignificant frequency on ham radio could have such power is just amazing. It equally amazing that someone who is so crude and boorish as yourself does not see that the USA's image is damaged by people like you on 14.313. Your activites there can be described as sick. Your comments to Douglas (NR5T) about the death of his child on an international frequency on 20 meters---how many people around the world heard you say that Douglas's wife was to blame for his child's death---your sick comments were heard around the world-----

>Answer this Oris-how would you feel if you >insulted, dehumanized and ostracized by white trash? How would you feel if >you

Why don't you ask OTK this question?
Porkies comments to an African American was one of the reasons why he is no longer on the air----and guess what---it was a tape made by a Liberty Net memeber that was OTK's undoing!!!!!!!!!!!!!HA HA HA
And yet you do not chastise the Gentleman fron South Carolina (OTK).

>You think these bums should have a right PUBLICLY deny or trivialize the >Holocaust on a medium which is heard worldwide?

Here is the crux of the problem. Doc is involved in Holocostmania. His every breath is beathed for the Holocaust. Why is it we do not hear of the Holocausts in Russia, or China-----or how about the almost 60 million dead children in the USA alone via abortion. Get over it----that was almost 60 years ago. And you of all people to scream about death---when you take great glee in the deaths of others. Shame on you.

Rile Hollingsworth is not here to save ham radio. He is here to preside over its death. He is put into a position to allow the process of government control to take over and then sell off the frequencies to the highest bidder. He's been there and done that in the past---he'll do it again---to all of you Riley suckbutts.

Nonsence--illogical----the country did not grant us anything. But the creator gave us those rights and the Constitution recognized the rights granted to us by GOD------the founders of this once great nation knew that God gave us the liberties that we have---and the Constitution and the Bill of rights was written to prevent this government from infinging on those god given rights.

You do not know anything of the Constitution and you shoudl restrict your comments to hate speach--which you know wo well.

Hours? Try seconds. For example, your article's header contained the address 208.255.249.181; on UNIX I enter:

nslookup 208.255.249.181

PRODIGY BUSY SIGNALS (off topic)

This is a little off topic, but since we are all internet users, I thought I would let you know of a problem with PRODIGY INTERNET.

Prodigy has OVERSOLD its ability to provide service to customers in a dozen or more states. (To get a listing, call 800/213-0992 and select option 3).

As a result, current users receive endless BUSY SIGNALS when attempting to connect and bogus error messages if they are lucky enough to get through.

You would think Prodigy would have learned something from the AOL debacle of a few years ago, but apparently the quest for the dollar cancels any moral obligation to take care of current customers.

So, if you were thinking of switching to Prodigy, THINK AGAIN.

They are giving away 3 years' worth of the service with the purchase of any computer from Best Buy. Perhaps this has something to do with it.

Actually, ANY dialup connection is too slow and outdated in this day and age. See if DSL and/or cable modem service is available in your area. Once you've accessed the Internet in this manner, you'll never go back to analog phone lines and busy signals.

Excellent message, Hans. Should be required reading for all license tests.

I had a similar experience. I was introducing Ham radio to friend (ex-cb user and supervisor at a local IRS office). Several other interested IRS employees were listening to the conversation. My wife, also an IRS employee, was on one end of the conversation at the IRS office, and I was on the other end. We were talking over a repeater.

At one point, he asked about the "roger beep" trailing each transmission. Rather than confusing him with lingo, I did not correct his choice of words. Instead, I explained the purpose of the "roger beep" or courtesy tone on a repeater. And, a few moments later, on another topic, he used a CB term in our conversation.

I guess all this was too much for Frank (the local "radio cop"). Without so much as an excuse me, he keyed up with a ten minute lecture about the use of CB terms on ham radio and a determined explination of the courtesy tone on a repeater.

Note that Frank did not follow procedure in all this. He did not give his callsign between transmissions and he did not wait to be acknowledged. He just keyed up with a continious ten minute lecture, only pausing long enough for the repeater to reset.

Knowing that others were listening, I tried to be as polite as possible when I got a chance to say something. But the longer Frank talked, the madder I got (not for me, but for the impression Frank was giving ham radio).

My wife, on the other hand, was busy trying to do damage control. The IRS employees in her office were shocked by Frank's angry outburst. One asked my wife who he was. She tried to down play the situation by explaining that Frank only sounded angry because of the way he talked over the radio. I don't think they bought it.

A lot of old-timers seem to think it is their job to educate those new to ham radio. And that is probably a good thing if done properly. Sadly, all too often, it is not done properly.

You have to realise that when you jump into another person's conversation, you are already intruding into their life. At that point, a person is going to have very little patience to sit and listen to a lecture.

So obviously, your interruption had better be about something important. And the fact that you don't like the words being used is not that important. When a person is talking with a friend, all that matters is that the friend understands what is being said.

I could go on, but Hans said it all. I expecially like the part about school in the fourth paragraph. Nobody like to be talked down to, and that is exactly what the "radio cop" often does when he lectures.

Again, this message should be required reading. Send it in to all the magazines, Hans.

These were international conferences to determine frequencies and procedures for services such as maritime and (later) aviation, tariffs, and other such areas.

For example, the safety of life at sea portion of the 1947 Atlantic City conference shows the following requirements placed in force:

Catagory Of Vessel: All passenger ships; all cargo ships over 1600 tons
Radio Gear Required: A2, 150 miles
Emergency Gear: 100 miles spark permitted Watches: Continuous unless auto-alarm. At least one qualified operator.
Listening hours prescribed.

RDF: Required for ships over 1600 tons. Medium frequency.
Lifeboat Radio: CW installation in Class A motor lifeboats. Portable gear if over 20 lifeboats carried.
Navigational Gear: RDF
Frequencies: 500 kc, 2182 kc, 8364 kc.

Amateur radio was discussed at these conferences, but attention was focused more on the commercial and safety services.

You'll love this, MF: ARRL officials have been invited to attend every post-WWI international radio conference as part of the U.S. delegation.

Don't give up on amateur radio, Kurt. We need you. I need you. I enjoy this hobby and do not want to see it die. Join the fight to make ham radio better. In this fight, you don't need a gun or knife. The only weapons you need is a friendly attitude and a little tolerance.

If the old-timers won't let you join their conversations, than just ignore them. Listen for other beginners and strike up a good conversation. If you do this often enough, so you will have a huge number of people to talk to, and the old-timers will be coming around wanting to join into your conversations.

Well, since you recently got your license, you are a ham. And your wife must obviously see something positive in you (unless you make her want to puke).

And I'm sure the overall atmosphere in the resturant improved when you and your wife arrived. So things could not have been that bad. Just think how much the impression of ham radio would have improved if you two had worn hats with your callsigns.

All families cannot be a attractive as your family, but we do the best we can with what we have. You are so lucky to have such an attractive wife who can afford to look down her nose at others.

Hey, three paragraphs of sarcasm in one message - that has to be a record of some kind.

Herein lies the real problem with these radios when sold to CBers. In addition to the "freeband", they also provide access to the entire 10-meter band. Modified CB radios with "extras" and "sliders" have been around forever, but these usually stop around 27.800. While illegal, at least these operations do not bother the amateurs. But the newer breed of illegals, using "10-meter radios", thinks nothing about going past 28Mhz and interfering with the hams. This problem has grown markedly worse in the past several months, based on what I'm hearing from my location. When I hear AM, roger beeps, no callsigns, and dirty linears on 28.015, I'm pretty sure it's not an amateur operator doing weak signal work.

I had no problem with ARRL until 1983 or so.

They choose to ignore the real problem; people (especially younger people) will not spend their money on radios when they can buy computers for half the price and not have to belly up to the bar of big guns. And not have Riley illegally dictating what topics they can and can't discuss.

I can hold my own as I'm a better operator, but most newcomers will not develop the skill once they see the mess even if they do get licensed.

VHF FM and SSB licenses in Dixie cup packages aren't the answer, aside from keeping the ARRL pension fund fat and happy.

That's ideal.
In reality, Old timers think they own the freqs you talk on and want to have you kicked off.
The problem is, alot of old timers are members of the ARRL and FCC and indeed can cause you trouble.
Why is it that the largest majority of HAM's are still the disfunctional trailer trash, alchoholic type with a dawg in his yard?
On the other hand, why are the majority of CB'ers the same way?

Another example of NWO in action. These undisciplined people can't manage their own lives and affairs, that's why the Dutch and Portuguese took over and ruled them for 300 years. Then the unAmerican Roosevelt-Truman red regime rescued them from the Japanese and forced the European powers to grant them "independence" post-WWII so the Reds could take over. They should've been left under European power rule or barring that, to the tender mercies of the Japanese empire. I guarantee they would keep order there, and it wouldn't cost us a cent! As it is, the best thing we could do now is let them all kill each other to demonstrate the consequences of refusing to be ruled by their betters. But look out, here comes another load of "refugees" to pollute our land and make our society as screwed up as theirs is!

From: RAC Headquarters

Date: September 8, 1999

Subject: Basic+5 approved for 10M

Industry Canada has advised RAC that a Canada Gazette Part II Notice to be issued in the Canada Gazette on Saturday, 11 September, 1999 will grant approval for Amateur Radio Certificate holders with both Basic and 5 WPM Qualifications to operate on 10 Metres. The Notice will include the necessary amendment to RIC-2 and the authorization is to be effective 11 September. Amateurs with Basic + 5 WPM qualifications should check the Notice on the Industry Canada web site at http://strategis.ic.gc.ca/spectrum before operating.

This approval is the culmination of an initiative by RAC in response to requests to RAC Directors by amateurs across Canada. The approval follows extensive RAC/Industry Canada direct discussions, discussions in CARAB meetings, and public consultation by Industry Canada. The 56 responses received from the public consultation were overwhelmingly supportive of the initiative.

RAC appreciates the efforts by Industry Canada to accomodate this expansion of operating privileges. RAC also thanks all those individuals, clubs and organizations who contributed to the review.

For further information, see the RAC web site at http://www.rac.ca

>european station during the WAEDC - Contest, for example.

QTC's are simply reporting earlier QSOs with European stations to another European station. For example, let's say at 0001Z I worked EU3FH and he gave me QSO number 320. Later, say at 0115Z I work DJ5AU and he asks me if I have QTCs??
If I have only one and it is the first time I have QTC'ed during this WAE contest,
I answer R(oger), and report to him as follows:

QTC 1/1 (signifying QTC number 1, 1 QSO to report)
He acknowledges (on CW) "QRV" (I am ready to receive)

I then transmit:
"0001 EU3FH 320"

He acknowledges. If I had multiple QSOs to report (I can report up to 10 QTCs to each station I work, but never QTC the same QSO more than once)--I would wait for his acknowledgement, then proceed to the next QSO to report. It really works well on CW and RTTY, can be a little difficult on SSB if copy is rough.

Just yet another attempt by the Klinton regime to start a war there.

Please note:

1. Plans were drawn up for a military adventure earlier this year when there was a slight outburst of violence. DoD then shelved these plans.
They may be employed still.

2. Indonesia was a large donor to the Klinton regime's "campaign"

Perchance he seeks whether there was a code test requirement ?

I do not believe so, at the earliest 1900's conferences, as it was not a license requirement at first, then began at 5 wpm.

On this matter, I may stand corrected.

You've got to be joking. I can't tell you how many "big men" I've heard behind a microphone, cussing and threatening each other. One will then issue a challenge to meet and settle the issue, but it never happens. Just a bunch of useless talk.

You've spent several minutes typing two pagers of stuff I didn't

Is it justice that our "Komrade Klinton" allowed to go free some Puerto Rican terroists, when we have 3950 GREAT LIBERTY NET being jammed Soviet-Style and Mr. Hollingsworth says he's monitoring 3950 and allowing these jammers like WA9KJI, KK7HO, K5BLB and others to jam it? And Good folks like KV4FZ, who is'nt allowed to renew his Ham ticket? Being railed by that InterCon-artist Net. Rumor has it that there was a murder plotted on 14.313 many years ago, where was the FCC then?

THAT IS NOT JUSTICE!!! SAVE KV4FZ and THE LIBERTY NET!

Think about it. This is the same president who killed innocent children at Waco!

Are you sure? I don't think that call was ever issued to a station anywhere.

There was a station in Newark with the call WJZ, first commissioned in May of 1921. It moved to NYC two years later. In March of 1953 the call letters were changed to WABC, and is still on the air. In 1957 that call (WJZ) was reactivated as a Baltimore TV station.

Seems unlikely. That call falls in a block (WXA-WZZ) which was reserved for the Dept. of the Army at least as early as 1914.

PicturePacket is a Windows95/98/NT control program for TNCs. In its Lite mode it's all the software many packet users may ever need, and it's free! Download version 1.41 from the SA Watch/KaWin/PicturePacket home page: http://www.sni.net/kawin/

PicturePacket 1.41 adds Internet DGPS Beacon mode for registered PicturePacket/Plus users. Now, any packet radio station can beacon DGPS correction signals obtained directly from the Internet. This beacon data is decoded by the receiving TNC to dramatically reduce the position error of GPS.

RFE, I'd like to whack every RF Cop on the back with a Hamstick, BUT...

JAMMING a repeater is bad news no matter justification you might want to attach to it. It's illegal, and you know it. The jammer knows it, too.

I'd agree with the ham formerly known as WB2OTK, but if you already bought them and can't return them, get a codefree technician license.

Go here http://www.arrl.org

DO NOT try what other hang gliders have done and used them without a license. Unlicensed VHF users are easier to locate than the spectacle going on on some HF frequencies.

Although if the FCC was awake, I told them where the 3950 music jammer was a week ago; of course, then they might need to actually FINE someone.

The present liberal top-loaded FCC prefers the impotent didactic method of enforcement.

He did not kil them. A group of jack booted thugs under his control did.

A survey of US Marines recently revealed many would fire on their fellow citizens, while the majority would not. Their CO remarked he was concerned not with those who wouldn't, but those who would.

It's the same bunch who posts a "nigger check-point" sign at their Nazi ATF gathering each summer in Virginia, then proceeds to arrest the rest of the citizenry for using the word in public.

These people are bums, no different than the able-bodied minority or trash white on welfare.

They spend ages 18-22 in the Army, then join the praetorian guard, retire after 20 years and become security specialists. They never get a real job; they're always on the dole. Typically, they are also the same bunch of delinquents who in the high school years, harass local police authorities to no end. They continue to have contempt for state and local rights in adulthood and exercise it through their "jobs."

Yeah, riggght! What does it have to do with amateur radio? I'm sure it doesn't matter one bit to rram what my "situation" is. At LEAST I put my callsign on my posts. It has been said that a man is three things. What he thinks he is, what others think he is, and what he really is.

I still didn't need a big gang around me at a table at Dayton, like YOU did, Polly. You were afraid that the Goodfellows WOULD show up, weren't you? That's the rumphumper/barflie way, attack in numbers, since they couldn't stand on their own .

Here we go with the "nit speak" again....

KK7HO incited:

Tim, we Liberty Net members will be looking forward to Terry Nichols's release from prision just as the FALN. To be consistant your hero, bill clinton, should release Nichols, as he was not present at the bomb site either.

> Ps. I expect a damn apology Davies you LYING son of a Bitch. YOU KNOW I haven't Tim, this is your "Role Reversal" technique. You are the jammer and lyer. See the end of this post for a URL that -PROVES- you are the lying jammer.

> I expect you to straighten out your > LIE. Any MAN with any decency wouldn't have LIED like you just did, and if they

This is some sort of Freudian "Role Reversal". Tim It's been documented that you have been lying in this newsgroup on 100's of posts. Why are you telling someone else to clean up his lies? Then You attack his manhood. This is a new low, even for you Tim Volz.

You are the "man" that enticed your daughter to mass email a poronographic message to the liberty net members. What kind of a "man" would do that Tim?

Or was this just another lie Tim? Was it you that sent out the homosexual email messages? Then when comfronted with irrefutable evidence, you attempted to shift the blame to your daughter. What a "man" you are Tim.

Sorry, I cannot help with Badger boards.

If you have installed Linux you will almost certainly installed the HOWTO's.
Have a look in /usr/doc/HOWTO/AX25-HOWTO and /usr/doc/HOWTO/HAM-HOWTO , these will give you chapter and verse.

However, I would allow access to the packet system to all (Listen), but only allow licenced users to connect (Call). This could be managed by group membership.

I had a guy tell me that he was moving to Philly PA. He said that he wanted the HF rig. He said he would call me Friday. Well its saturday and I have not heard from him. His offer was a Kenwood all mode 2-meter rig. So I'm reposting what I have for sale or trade.
I have an ICOM 740 HF mobile that I would like to sale or trade. I'll Take 300.00 cash plus shipping thatï¿½s about 25.00 give or take. I trade
It for a Pentium 233 socket 7(I will consider any other Intel Pentium Computers above 120 MHz) with at least 2 gig hard drive and 32 Megs of ram, 56K V.90 modem,(I will consider 33.6 and 1 gig harddrive) Keyboard

Mouse and 13in svga monitor. Or I will take a 2-meter all mode base rig Digital readout. Tell me what you have to offer for this HF rig.
The ICOM 740 is the stock IC-740 it has no power supply it runs Strictly 12 volts DC. The rig is in good clean shape and I don't smoke and the guy that had it before me doesn't smoke. I was the third owner.
I ran the rig in the mobile. The rig covers all the ham bands. It Doesnï¿½t have a continuous coverage receiver. The rig has both sidebands
CW
And RTTY as far as modes. Its dimensions are 111mm (H) x 286mm (W) x 374mm (D). Itï¿½s rated at 200 watts input. I will include stock mic and instruction manual.

Just bought a pair of Cobra Microtalk 1's in anticipation of a cycling trip in the Netherlands, when I suddenly wondered... what's the FRS band used for in Europe? If we take them to Europe and use them, what happens?

a) Everything's fine, FRS band is international
b) Technically illegal but the radios will work and nobody will care
c) Won't be able to talk because we'll be drowned out by Dutch foithboinders sending frammis traffic on that frequency
d) Every time we press the talk buttons we'll set off Dutch blasting operations and crash Dutch helicopters
e) Dutch FCC will follow us with RDF vans and haul us to jail

One may disagree with N8WGM's position on such things -- or on anything -- and yet note the decorum and civilized manner in which his positions are expressed.

A person's newsgroup behavior isn't really dependent on the positions he takes, but on the civility and consideration for other users he shows through his participation.

One may take quite outrageous positions on matters of opinion, and still have perfect newsgroup behavior.

N8WGM's newsgroup behavior, though subject to criticism like anyone else's, is light-years ahead of KC8JBO's, whose torrents of vulgarities, obscenities, and seemingly endless crude insults would be inappropriate even were he right on every single issue he undertook to debate.

Surely you can see that.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Threatening to stalk someone and possibly resorting to violence is not acting in a civilized manner.

Encouraging someone to break federal law, regardless of the polite manner of his invitation, is to be condemned in no uncertain terms.
Shame on you, Kevin, for praising his manner of posting such things yet ignoring the implications.

I invite you to and re-read the threats of stalking and possible of civility contained in his messages.

What I see is (again) WGM encouraging someone to violate federal communication law (oh, but done in a "nice" way), and also threatening to stalk another amateur in a not so nice way. JBO's noisy comments are of no concern to me, for they are at least conducted in a lawful manner.

Stalking is sick behavior, and in many locales, unlawful. Shame on you again for ignoring that fact.

Surely you're not trying to justify WGM's actions only because of JBO's antagonistic newsgroup comments in regard to certain on-the-air nets.

Jeff and KC8JBO, neither change will benefit No Code Amateur. It just makes so much sense that even a No Code Amateur can see it. It is those amateurs that see some kind of reduction in their own status that cannot see it.

Seems like a double standard with those people. It's perfectly allright to encourage the use of illegal power on the eleven meter band, but when somebody strongly disagrees with them, that's a crime. However, check out goober's posts in rec.radio.shortwave, they are less than civil.

The federal government recently purchased the rest of the year and into next year's production run of Honda generators. A purchasing agent who works for a major corporation was told to order 150 generators for the company he works for. He put in the order and was told that he may or may not get that order due to the government's demand that all generators that Honda USA makes for the rest of this year go to the US government. A cheap way to make a generator of your own would be to buy from a junk yard a 4 cylinder engine out of a wreck and hook it up to several alternators. You could then charge a bank of batteries and convert via an invertor to AC current. I've made one of these out of a Honda 1600 cc engine and have hooked up 5 General motors alternators from the junk yard to it and it generates all the power I'll ever need. I charge up 12 deep cycle batteries and the charge is good for my power usage for about a week. And it only uses about 5 gallons per week to run. My total cost was $150.00 for the engine and 20 bucks each for the alternators. The most costly part of this system was the batteries. At $89.00 each I've wrapped up about a grand just for the batteries.

But it was worth it due to the fact that the power company wanted to charge me $5,000.00 to bring power into my remote rural area.

If you can't get a generator by now or the prices are being jacked up due to gouging, then this is by far the best way to get into power generating.
N8WGM

His behavior makes me wonder if the batteries and generator are inside his house.
He's inhaling too many fumes. Although I do wish I was on a hill.

You know, it does. It sounds like something out of WW2. Goober's one of those "survivalists," or a wannabe. With the effects of a nuclear bomb, those logs may last a millisecond or two, The woods around the "house" will be charred cinders, along with his wood and shingle roof and there will be no way to grow food in a conventional manner. The EMP will take out any electronics that are plugged in to power and a antenna system of conventional power system. If the rigs, etc, are powered by an extension cord from the generator transient protection should be employed. The external power generator should be ok. He better hone his CW skills, because the bands will not be useable. The bands will be silent, and if any transmissions from the direction of the blast will not be heard. The RF loss by signal absorption and attenuation is the result of the blast.

Who knows. I guess he found out his propaganda didn't fit the facts. Instead of a trailer, he found that I lived in a house. It's not like my old house in another state which sold for $185,000, but it's all I need. I do need more room for antennas. Maybe he realized from gawking in my window from the street that I'm not obese, and changed his tune.
Oh well, it was humorous anyway. And to think he said I wouldn't be home. LOL!

I'll ask my question again: why do you insist on imitating the style and content of someone who was quite possibly the biggest pestilence this newsgroup has ever seen?

That was one of the advantages of the old three-month wait between passing the exams and receiving the license; the new ham could only sit and listen, all the while learning procedures and protocol.

Yeah,right. My neighbors will call the police when a suspicious vehicle is Hello, My house is built with Concrete--not cinder blocks---12" with reinforcement both vertical & horizontal. My method of bonding the blocks together is called surface bonding. Your local building supply store may sell a product that looks like plaster--but it has millions of fiberglass reinforcement strands in i t. This method of laying block requires no skill in masonry other than keeping the wall straight and level. It also makes the wall 12 times stronger than standard bonding. Another benefit is that a surface bonded wall will be much more water resistant than a block and mortar wall. The waterproofing is with standard waterproofing tar, but after aplying the tar, I also aplied a 6 mill black plastic barrier. I've not had any water problems in over 3 years. My roof is a standard roof -- I'm earth bermed---with 40 year shingles and 4 skylights. An earth covered roof would be ideal--but in order to do that, you would need to engineer a roof to withstand all that weight. Also a regular roof is much easier to keep waterproof---if a leak occurs in an earth roof---you've got to start digging. My floor is 8 inches of reinforced concrete--insulated on the perimeter only. A fully insulated floor is tough to accomplish due to having to step on the insulating boards and they have a habit of cracking up with too much weight. Under the concrete I have 6 iches of washed river gravel with 12 drains running through just in case any water finds itself under the floor. I also have 6 mill plastic under the floor--maily to allow the concrete the cure without the gravel taking any water from the concrete too soon when it is setting. I have log siding on the exposed areas of outside walls--it looks like a log cabin partly burried into the side of a hill. My views are great and I have a south facing exposure to a valley below. As far a zoning-----no zoning where I'm at! I built the root cellar the same as the house--only using twice as much isulating blue board--R50 on the walls and R70 on the roof--the cellar is completely burried except for the north facing door. I do have a small vent that I keep open to prevent any mustyness. N8WGM

A linear is illegal for CB---But it is nice! The FCC is no longer enforcing the radio spectrum laws so go for it. You would indeed get out better, but as the previous post suggests, you also have to hear the other guy. There is not much jamming or QRM on the USB/LSB frequencies and you will often hear CBers talking skip with just 5 watts. 200 watts will allow you to get out farther. During the upcoming solar cycle, you will be hearing more foreign & distant stations in on the CB bands. I would also suggest you ground to the best of your ability your antenna. I found running on the ham bands that a good ground and 100 watts is by far better than a poor ground and1000 watts.
Make sure your SWR is low and your 4 watts will sound like 200. The old rule applies.The man with the better antenna and ground will allways win. N8WGM

Ol' Steve here sure does follow the rules .....doesn't he?

On the contrary. This past six months has seen the FCC become more active in enforcement than has been the case in several years. Specific cases involve amateur operators engaging in prohibited communications on 75 meters and out-of-band CB operators.

In the endless war of vulgarities, obscenities, and witless one-liners that the 14313 gang (of which N8WGM is not a member) has unfortunately brought to this newsgroup, the Wiseman (JBO) personage is certainly one of the top five offenders.

One may question N8WGM's desire to be so close to Wiseman, even briefly, or to engage him in extended conversation -- but compared to KC8JBO, N8WGM has been a newsgroup paragon.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Hmm, maybe your FRS radio will trigger some sort of military warning system which will then declare war on Germany. Watch out for the Saab fighter jets which will be arriving at your location soon.

Well, where's WGM to back up your assertions? <snicker> I doubt you could

6868. Sept VHF QSO "Party" a flop

I reluctantly get on every VHF contest as the rest of the time it's dead on these bands; the rules for this one should've read:

Rules, September VHF QSO Party

Contests ��General�Rules ��Rules�for�VHF�Contests
1. Object: To listen to as much white noise as possible in as many different 2 degrees X 1 degree grid squares as possible using the most expensive VHF/UHF all-mode radio you can find. Foreign stations work W/VE amateurs on HF only, you'll waste your time on VHF.

2. Date and Contest Period: You can't tell it's started, but the second full weekend of September. Begins 1800 UTC Saturday, ends 0300 UTC Monday (September 11-13, 1999).

3. Entry Categories:

3.1. Single Operator, codeless (you must ask for a minimum of three callsign repeats each contact and use Q signals intended for CW)

3.2. Single Operator, QRP Portable (intended for stations who are too scared of girls to go to the beach all summer).

3.3. Rover (you must be driving a conversion van with yagis which are operable while in motion; subtract 1500 points for each overpass you hit)

3.4. Multioperator pizza party.
3.5. Limited Multioperator barbeque.

4. Exchange: Grid-square locator (see April 1994 QST, p 86, or just ask who you're working to look up what grid YOU'RE in).

4.1. Exchange of signal report is optional and useless as everyone is 59...

6. Miscellaneous:

6.1. Stations may be worked for credit only once per band from any given grid square, regardless of mode. This does not prohibit working a station from more than one grid square with the same call sign (such as a Rover).
6.2. Only one signal per band (6, 2, 1 1/4, etc) at any given time is permitted, regardless of mode, unless you're K1MAN or W1AW.
6.3. Multioperator stations may not include QSOs with their own family, except on frequencies higher than 2 meters. Even then, a complete, different station (triband HT, antenna) must exist for each QSO made under these conditions.

7. Awards:

7.2. Participation Pins

7.2.1. Available, while supply lasts, to all who make at least 2 contacts (any combination of bands and modes) during the contest.

7.2.1.1.This includes all operators of qualifying multioperator efforts.
7.2.2. Send order to: ARRL Contest Branch, 225 Main St, Newington, CT 06111.
7.2.2.1.Price is $55 for each 24k gold, mother of pearl inlaid pin.
7.2.2.2.1 Genuine ROLEX watches are avaible for $695.
7.2.2.2.2 Get your picture taken with Dave Sumner, K1ZZ for $35
7.2.2.2.3 Get your picture taken with Dave Sumner, K1ZZ for $35

7.2.2.2.Make check or money order payable to the ARRL, "Bank of Switzerland" account (no cash please).
7.2.2.3.Include a return mailing label, padded mailer, and postage (preferably a self-adhesive type), or better yet drive to Newington and we'll hand one to you.

Note how KK7HO refuses to address which should be rounded up and thrown into prison because of their supposed

I thought that might have been KKKevin who did that. I have it recorded. Of course he's jammed before, most all of them have. I, and many many others van attest to that and the fact that Riley "caught" Vic doing it is just further evidence. Why Riley has found it in his heart just to warn Vic is beyond me.

I am the lucky owner of an FT8000 and the ADMS-2d software... but i am not able to make the template-file. The computer downloads the radio unto 100% is reach... but then i get the message: "Receive timeout". I have tried allmost evrything.. but my settings are correct and my cable is also ok.

If someone has a xxx.tpl file for the FT8000r to mail me i'll be glad :-)
That way i can test if its possible to upload anything to the radio....

Had you noticed the fact that I used "fillip" as a noun and not a verb, you undoubtedly would have encountered the correct definition:

(From http://www.m-w.com/cgi-bin/dictionary):

Main Entry: fillip Function: noun
Date: 1519

1 a : a blow or gesture made by the sudden forcible straightening of a finger curled up against the thumb b : a short sharp blow : BUFFET

2 : something tending to arouse or excite: as a : STIMULUS <just the fillip my confidence needed> <lent a fillip of danger to the sport> b : a trivial addition : EMBELLISHMENT <showy fillips of language> c
: a significant and often unexpected development : WRINKLE <plot twists and fillips>

At any rate, the point was that your blatherings against the legitimate participants on 3950 are but a recent, and small, addition to the years-long torrent of vulgarity, obscenity, and ignoble lies which constitute your Usenet oeuvre.

Happy Internetting,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

The Hurricane Watch Net has been activated on 14.325 Mhz USB. This is a very informative network of volunteer Amateur Radio stations who provide information within the affected area of a hurricane.

Shortwave listeners and other interested parties should monitor this frequency for bulletins and information.

The Hurricane Watch Network has a webpage. It is located at www.hwn.org Bulletins and further info is available at this page.

Licenced Radio Amateurs in the affected areas should monitor this net and do not transmit on this frequency unless directed to do so by the Network Control Operator.

That's all they are about is double standards. They have always attacked anyone

CAUTION: OFFENSIVE LANGUAGE
Transcript of K5BLB 12/98 ~ 3.950 MHz
"K5BLB Anti-Semitic Outburst"

K5BLB- "They screwed up; they contradicted themselves in the New Testament. When God decided that they were "chosen" all right and they were chosen as dirty rats to be punished for all eternity for the crucifixion of Jesus Christ.

These are the people that you call JEWS today and you take a look at their skin and you see them everyday on television.
THEY ARE NOT WHITE PEOPLE! They are "Mongoloid Zionists" that migrated in and run the Twelve Tribes of Israel out.

I am a Jew, Walt (W2YEE), you are a Jew by birth and nationality of our ancestors in Jerusalem. We were the white men run out of that country. These "Mongoloid Dogs" that have taken over Israel today are not Jews, they are Zionist
Dirty Rotten Communist Rats, and that's all they ever will be!

And the prophesies of the Bible read that there will be a gathering of the original Jews in a New Jerusalem, and believe me, that damn sure is not New York City, K5BLB."

Now tell me, why would anyone like KK7HO want to be arround Sid??

The manual (and on-screen help menu) says to:

1) press VHF or UHF band select
2) press the CONT SEL button
3) press the VHF+PWR buttons simultaneously

Well, pressing VHF the second time cancels out the "ctrl" flag on the display, and pressing the PWR button shuts down the unit (what a surprise!).

If you know the right sequence, I (and 3 other TMV7A owners) would appreciate it.

As far as JBO's comments about the Liberty Net go; they're just a very recent fillip on his gigantic mountain of gross and grotesque excresences. Most of his output seems to be related to the bizarre yet banal world of 14313 and its numerous Hatfields and McCoys.
You'll note that I've criticized the other side of this moronic insult contest, too.

The "linear" comments were in the context of a survivalist newsgroup, where it is conceivable that such equipment might be used in a perfectly lawful manner; that is, for emergency saving of life and limb, or in a place or time when the bureaucracy's regulations have become inoperative, or completely outside their jurisdiction.

And I hardly think it's "stalking" to do the same thing that journalists do hundreds if not thousands of times per day, especially when the party being investigated is notified ahead of time, something that neither reporters nor private investigators often bother to do.

Even putting the worst possible construction on N8WGM's postings, how can anything he's posted compare in harm to the radio newsgroups and their reputation to KC8JBO's vomitings, such as:

Creating false scenarios, described in sickening detail, in which other Usenet posters are engaging in the grossest imaginable sexual perversions; stating that a young man's girlfriend wears an artificial male organ; laughing at and apparently approving of interracial prison rape; accusing another user's father of violent rape of the user as a child, described in the most graphic of terms; and more -- far more: these are what I found in a very quick check at deja.com.

Compared to KC8JBO, N8WGM _is_ a Usenet paragon. I'll go further:
compared to KC8JBO, even KK7HO is a Usenet paragon.

I agree with your pro-free-speech "tune away" axiom.

But on numerous occasions, the diseased creature in Estancia doesn't give his "listeners" a choice. He makes his "comments" on top of ongoing QSOs -- in fact, he justifies this by saying that he or one of his dwindling gang of accomplices had been mentioned, thus giving him, in his own words, the "right" to "talk over" the existing QSO.

But the most interesting thing about the transcript, showing K5BLB's cosmically misinformed animus toward Jews, is that K5BLB is part of the group that attacks the legitimate users of 3950 as "haters."

Odd, isn't it, that the self-styled "anti-racists" who wish to tar the Liberty Net and other legitimate operators with the badge of "hate" have as major co-conspirators such beings as K5BLB, to say nothing of the crudely anti-Black WB2OTK?

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Can someone explain this man's fascination with homosexuals? I have heard him

Now, Lloyd, don't project your bedwetting and inability to control your bowels on somebody else. I'll explain why I did what I did in this story. You probably won't understand the meaning but here goes:

The prey runs from the tiger knowing that each being well armed by nature with deadly strength may kill the other. Running he saves his own life and that of the tiger. This is not cowardice. It is the love of life.

Get it?

For some reason or other, K5BLB appears convinced that a conspiracy of "nazi" homosexuals is trying to "run him off" 3950.

At first, I thought that this was merely another example of the empty insults which are the norm for people of BLB's class.

But, after listening to his ravings for some seven years, I have now become convinced that, at least on some level, he actually believes that such a conspiracy exists.

Why he focuses on imaginary perverts, much less "nazi" ones, is beyond my understanding; but I do note that the troubled mind often projects its own shortcomings and insecurities upon those it imagines to be its "enemies."

Happy hamming,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Thank you for showing the forum that "SLOPE HEAD" Roger Wiseman is a yelow belly who would not come out from under his "MOMS" feather bed to face you. You told him you meant no harm to him. He was too cowardly to even walk from his trailer to greet you. WHAT A CALLOW SKUMBAG! Yes he is being real brave now that you are not in the neighborhood. Some people have called him on the phone and he tells them"IF YOU CALL HERE AGAIN I WILL CALL THE POLICE" They said his tooth was chattering on his lower gums and you could hear him shaking in his flip flops. What a wuss!

OK, fine. So YOU are not saying that they're a "hate" group, even though you keep advertising those allegations made by someone else. If the claims you make about some of them belonging to those groups are true, then I say GOOD FOR THEM, MORE POWER TO THEM! HOWEVER ... you still refuse to address your buddy K5BLB's "anti-Semitic" remarks. If you're gonna condemn the Liberty Net, then you're gonna have to condemn K5BLB. How about it?

In what way does Wiseman's assertion constitute "confirmation" of anything? I don't purposely interfere with other stations, and fail to understand why anyone would.

Furthermore, I was otherwise engaged Saturday night, and didn't get on the air until almost two in the morning, at which time I had a QSO with W1WCR, N8WGM, and KE4NY.

KK7HO accusing anyone of jamming reminds me of Pol Pot accusing somebody of being "mean."

That's a bullshit story if one has ever been spieled out here. "first personal" wasn't even used on CB till the late 80's-early 90's.

WAY off base, again. Military unit radio ops NEVER used their personal name in their operations.

That's just simply wrong, whatever the reason you're puting it forth.

NOW you're beginning to smell a little credible....Hams used "handle" long before I got into the hobby, and CBers just picked it up. Never was the idiotic "first personal" monikor used till REAL late in the game.

Or maybe your dad was its first CB user and you just didn't know the difference.....and maybe still don't.

Hello Roger and thanks for the welcome. I've been BUSY as all hell in other fields than ham radio and this board. However I received many e-mails and calls from friends telling me about these "Herbie whores'" dirty deeds and libel. A lot seemed to be coming from the dumbo eared Sears flunkie who had crap until he married Ruth Crawford who's family own much real estate in the Memphis area. Polly's bitter over the deaths of his wife and daughter. Rumor has it from cancer. I don't believe it-they committed suicide having a husband and father the ilk of Georgie Boy. Other rotten comments have been coming from Billy Jerk Moore, the guy who's built like a golf club with a missing putter. I guess the time has come to once again start ripping them to shreds. Doc

Hi,
I'm trying to draw a band plan from 5 to 6 Ghz. The thing i'm interested in is the overlap between the different applications (ISM, HIPERLAN, HAM, space, ...) in different locations (US, Europe, ...).
It would help if some could send me the the allocation at their location.

Kind regards,

>Where's N8WGM?

I was at your house this last Saturday------
Here is what happend for all that want to know....

I traveled to Glendale West Virginia last Saturday 9/11/99.
I drove down Glen Haven Avenue and asked a Neighbor if 610 Glen Haven was the adress of Roger L Wiseman.
He said "Yes it Is and He is home."
I told Him---"Old Roger is a notorious web troublemaker and ham radio thug."
He said "Knock on the Door---I know he's home."
Not wanting to create any problems of tresspass or anything like that, I called old Roger on the car phone.(I will not give out his number to anyone.That may be Rogers Style but not mine.)
I dialed the number and a female answered, "hello". I said "Hello, may I speak to Roger L. Wiseman." The female voice said, "just a minute."
A male voice then said, "hello".
I then said "Hello Roger, this is N8WGM,Steve Tunder. Why don't you come outside so we can talk this thing out face to face. Don't worry I won't harm you in any way. I just...."
Roger in a very angry voice then said.."I thought I told you I don't want anything to do with you....You can kiss my ass....."
He then hung up.
I proceded to take some photos of Rogers home.....not a very big place at all---My pickup truck is about as long as this house is wide. I would guess it to be around 700 square feet. It's well kept up---no junk cars or anything like that-----but very small--The lot is about 50 by 100 feet----tiny and cramped.-Old Roger must not make much money.......Anyway---the window blinds then came closed as I waved to the cowering Roger-----not much of a man to hide behind his walls----and blinds.And your strange fantasy you requested of me is not ever going to happen. Get that out of your mind. Why would you ask another man to kiss your ass? Is this some strange fetish you have? Please--seek some help--you can be cured of this odd behavior.

Anyway Roger-------I will be back---I've got a Minolta with a telephoto lense that is just begging to get a photo of you to put on the internet---------and Lloyd Davies N0VFP will get all the photos.....

And by the way Roger-----you are invited to come to my cabin in Southeastern Ohio. I will welcome you with no problem. Just beware of the dog------he doesn't like strangers-----just let me know ahead of time when you are comming so I can take him up north to my other house.
73's for now---I hope we will get to meet so we can talk this out man to man-----or man to window blind if need be.

There was a moderate AU opening here yesterday during the ARRL September VHF QSO Party. With my beam pointed north I heard 7 or 8 AU signals and worked one (grid EN50 to EN13 with 5 watts). Guess what mode all these people working AU were using? CW! Aurora wipes out any other mode. I think there was a guy calling CQ AU on SSB but I couldn't understand a thing he was saying.

>Where's N8WGM?

I was at your house this last Saturday------
Here is what happened for all that want to know....

I traveled to Glendale West Virginia last Saturday 9/11/99.
I drove down Glen Haven Avenue and asked a Neighbor if 610 Glen Haven was the address of Roger L Wiseman.
He said "Yes it Is and He is home."
I told Him---"Old Roger is a notorious web troublemaker and ham radio thug."
He said "Knock on the Door---I know he's home."
Not wanting to create any problems of trespass or anything like that, I called old Roger on the car phone.(I will not give out his number to anyone.That may be Rogers Style but not mine.)
I dialed the number and a female answered, "Hello." I said "Hello, may I speak to Roger L. Wiseman." The female voice said, "Just a minute."
A male voice then said, "Hello."
I then said "Hello Roger, this is N8WGM, Steve Tunder. Why don't you come outside so we can talk this thing out face to face? Don't worry I won't harm you in any way. I just...."
Roger in a very angry voice then said.."I thought I told you I don't want anything to do with you....You can kiss my ass....."
He then hung up.
I proceeded to take some photos of Rogers home.....not a very big place at all---My pickup truck is about as long as this house is wide. I would guess it to be around 650 square feet. It's well kept up---no junk cars or anything like that-----but very small--The lot is about 50 by 100 feet----tiny and cramped.-Old Roger must not make much money...probably spends too much time making angry hatefull posts....Anyway---the window blinds
then came closed as I waved to the cowering Roger-----not much of a man to hide behind his walls----and blinds. And Roger, your strange fantasy you requested of me is not ever going to happen. Get that out of your mind. Why would you ask another man to kiss your ass? Is this some strange fetish you have? Please--seek some help--you can be cured of this odd behavior.

Anyway Roger-------I will be back---I've got a Minolta with a telephoto lens that is just begging to get a photo of you to put on the Internet---------and Lloyd Davies N0VFP will get all the photos.....

And by the way Roger-----you are invited to come to my cabin in Southeastern Ohio. I will welcome you with no problem. Just beware of the dog------he doesn't like strangers-----just let me know ahead of time when you are coming so I can take him up north to my other house.
73's for now---I hope we will get to meet so we can talk this out man to man-----or man to window blind if need be.

Very true. The conditions in this year's contest were some of the worst

Obviously, you need to get your coke bottle lens changed. The blinds were open, otherwise how could I have seen your short, nazi haircut and dark rimmed glasses?
You stopped on the property line in the street, blocking traffic. Then you drove maybe 50 feet and stopped and hung your head out the window just like a flea bitten, mangy puppy dog which you resemble. I was standing in the window. You didn't make any effort to get out of that rusting white truck. You said you were going to knock on my door. He carries a large plastic container in the truck bed, which is probably his toilet.

Well, Blunder, what do I look like, what was I wearing. what color is my hair? Did you focus your coke bottle lenses long enough to see?

I have freinds in the Guersney county sherrifs department not so Wiseman. So what?
And by the way, this is not my only house. It is just a getaway from the city. I own two other homes. It is where my radio transmitting is done and my legal FCC adress. And my earth bermed home is more open & airy than most above ground homes. Making fun of a technology you do not understand is the sign that you are ignorant to the benefits of using the earth as a flywheel to heat & cool. My heating bills are $0.00 And in a storm, my home is where my neighbors go when the power goes out.
Hopefully you have a kind neighbor who will put you up in case Y2K hits.

I understand that the Internet thug, Roger L Wiseman had a visitor to his small 650 square foot home in "DOGPATCH" this week end. From the report "SLOPE HEAD" is not very successful as far as making money is concerned. Such small "DIGS" for a braggart. He received a phone call from the visitor who told him he would not be harmed. He answered this with a perverted request. I wonder if he requests this service from all his visitors including his trashy family. After this he cowered behind the window blinds, shaking all over and peeping and hiding behind the window. Just what I thought, big man on this forum. Just a jelly back lard assed coward when confronted in person, color "SLOPE HEAD WISEMAN" yellow, because that is exactly what he is..

Yes, I wish someone would educate these people that working a state away during an inversion on a repeater is NOT DX.

Going on SSB and working halfway across the U.S. IS.

I find that during tests on VHF, the repeaters become quiet for the period... yet there's no one on except the regulars. Perhaps they're down on 144.2 wondering who is transmitting scrambled signals.....

Yeah ok... that is why I have over 25 new logs from FM ONLY contacts that I worked in the southeast. And got to experience my first ever FM pile up!!! Yeah it was GREAT! Obviously if you know what you are doing and do it right then there will be lots of contacts out there. A friend of mine worked many many more stations because he had SSB capabilities rather than just FM as I did. Hmmm, this is not a good judgement of the overall contest as a whole. Maybe it is for your area because maybe you have this same attitude on the air and no one wants to be on while you are. This is just my opinion as well... but from our stand point the ARRL September VHF contest was GREAT and more importantly it was fun... I enjoyed it. I am not even turning in a "form" nor did I want to try to compete I wanted to enjoy myself and the nice weather outside and have fun. That is what we did and that was what it was about....

my 2 cents worth...

Are repeater frequencies assigned by the FCC or is it up to the individual repeater owner to find an open frequency?

Is there a frequency registration process that secures an individual a repeater frequency, thus prohibiting others from using the same frequency?

Is there a website that describes the Part 97 rules pertaining to repeater operation, licensing and registration?

Any assistance would be appreciated.

Thanks Guys

The freq's are set by the area repeater coordinators not the FCC.. You must not be a ham ,as all know that one, it's in the test...

You're right, Dick. I don't remember what my father used to say (it seems like a dozen times a week). The phrase is a CB phrase. Nobody ever used it on ham radio until they picked it up from CB'ers.

I'm so glad there are people like you, who know so much about radio (right down to what every single person on radio has ever said over the years), to correct us when we make a mistake like this.

As for the military stuff, I said that "I THINK he picked..." That was just a guess - I don't know where he actually got it from.

Hey, how about supporting a frequency for the VHF/UHF crowd. I don't live in a hurricane area right at the moment, but some of us do (and I recently did). I'm sure there are those with only VHF/UHF capabilities who would like to communicate with the outside also.

I was not suggesting a debate of legal issues Barry. Hurricane Floyd represents a bonna-fide emergency situation. SWL's and other interested parties may want to monitor 14.325 MhZ (USB) for ongoing two-way traffic which could provide for both interesting and useful information.
The HWN is also an excellent example of Amateur Radio Public Service in operation as a national resource of volunteer operators who give of their time, effort and electricity {free of charge} to aide and assist others.

This is Amateur Radio's reason and purpose.

Look out leaky and Johanson, a new find in the United States has challenged the current scientific view of human evolution. Gone is the old family tree of Australopithecus afarinsis and Homo habilis. The theory that bipedal primates spread throughout the world via Africa has finally been defeated by Anthropologists in West Virginia.

Dr. Jack Mihoff of Wake Forest has found the missing link. Not just a fraction of a mandible and some Tarsles that would have reconstruction experts busy for years, Dr. Mihoff has discovered a living specimen. The apelike man has been living under the alias of Roger Wiseman since his escape from an Arkansas freak show in the early 50's

"He is using anthropoidal locomotion like we would expect to see in A.afarensis but his cranial capacity is more along the lines of Homo neanderthalensis",claims Mihoff. "We have found that he can be taught to move bipedally, that is, the structure of the foot is capable but we just can't seem to get it out of his mouth long enough".

The scientists have also discovered that the new missing link can communicate simple, but abstract thoughts. Mihoff suggests that even though the new species resembles the greater apes, the fact that he can display this ability to have abstract thought separates him enough to be classified as a new species.

"We are calling the new find Homo sexual due to his bad habit of humping legs",says Dr. Mihoff.

It actually stems from the very origins of the ARRL, AMERICAN RADIO RELAY LEAGUE. When spark tx stations were used to relay 3rd party traffic across the continent. The tradition still follows to this day with both the government and amateur operators being disposed towards public service activities.

VK amateurs have a tradition of being lone rangers, somewhat, and the acceptance of public service is far less pronounced here. Derided, in fact.

Cheers, Bill. VK2GWG

Barry,

You're back to showing your ignorance again.

I don't know what is legal or not legal in your country, but this net is in the northern hemisphere and covers several countries in the Caribbean sea and North America. (Some other poster said it is in the US which is only one of several countries involved.)

In all of those countries, the PTT and other regulators have heartily endorsed this sort of operation by licensed amateurs.

Floyd isn't even on land and you cant get near even Weather Underground. Those in the path but not yet affected can't even get their local weather on-line as NOAA uses one server for the US.

Time after time, government servers have bogged down or crashed during stress events: Lewinsky; Starr report; Floyd.

This is what the government would use in an emergency ? They'd route long distance phone calls over a bogged down net that the powers refuse to pour continuous upgrades into ? The system that they wait for the latest crash of to respond to ?

Not to mention the inherent inefficiency that anyone not on Bill Gates' staff states publicly. The same information is sent over and over and over to users over a finite bandwidth, while wireless is received by everyone at once.

Talk about everything old being new again; they obviously didn't learn from the telegraphers of old.

Thank you, when I need a forecast, I'll keep turning on the REAL >>wireless<< TV (as I know my G2 player is half worthles on CNN half the time anyway).

I just read about KV4FZ in QST and couldn't believe it! I thought that this miscarriage of justice was handled long ago. A few years ago this information was being passed around....

Many years ago there was a hurricane ravaging the Carribean, and KV4FZ assumed the role of head of relief efforts. He was trying to pass some life-and-death traffic for over a day, and all the while Porkbutt was jamming his transmissions no matter when he was trying to pass it and regardless of frequency, even though Porkbutt was only a General class and KV4FZ was on frequencies unauthorized for Porkbutt.

Finally KV4FZ radioed a local ham on two meters and asked if he could use his cellphone to try to get the information through to the poor family in Missouri who had lost a loved one. KV4FZ picked it up and was trying to use it on the way home to pass the traffic but there was a code that needed to be punched in to get it to work....some securtiy thing. So he was communicating to his friend regarding how to punch in the access code when he was recorded by someone with a malicious intent and the whole thing was taken out of context.

This was the reward he got for trying to serve his fellow man.

Could be, but the book's not out yet. They first thought that he was a living A. robust but a closer look showed a much greater plantar flex action than A. robust. I am wondering still where Roger thinks I plagerized from. I guess he doesn't realize that I am a real live anthropologist and I don't have to copy someone else's work to sound like I know what I am talking about.

Who says you have to have two way conversations to keep it legal.
Did you know that as an amatuer operator, in the States, you get to fly model airplanes on certain frequencies by remote?
Also some radio clubs broadcast the Space Shuttle on H.F. and V.H.F..
It may be illegal in Australia but not here, dude

7081. shortwave radio, digital tuning, for travel

Can readers suggest a small shortwave radio with digital tuning, suitable for travel?

I know about Sony ICF-SW7600G and Grundig Yachtboy 400, both approx $200. Which is better? Any others?

Are there discount sources online or via 800/888 numbers?

Thanks in advance.

All listeners can be assured there will be no HF contesters, no FRC, PVRC, or YCCC members on board, and no restricted audio from 60 year old men who sound like their BVDs are too tight.

There will be no firearms, Whacko, or Butch Reno discussions, no "59 Q R ZED" comments, and no requests for 5 dollars to "QSL via buro". ARRL will offer no pins for 5 dollars to commemorate this event.

Just hams actually doing something for a change.

According to the complete list of all three letter calls ever used for broadcasting stations in the US at http://www.ipass.net/~whitetho/3roll.htm no broadcasting station ever used the call WYZ. This does not preclude the possibility that these calls were used by a ship to shore or other non broadcasting station.

Not at all, Mr. Schmitt and I have corresponded before. Many times. YOU are the one that seems to be concerned.

Actually you seem to be concerned about hiding yours. One thing for myself, Gerald Schmitt and a few others are WE are NOT hiding BEHIND a Bogus screen name. Now, if you were man enough, rather than play such a childish game, it would seem that you'd just say who you were, but then again, could we even believe you??

Not completely true. Although I never heard anyone in Navy Communications use a personal name on VOX, but on secure TTY we used our 'chops' after

INT QRK?
U R FIVERS
KKKKK

... and yes I do know the '?' is superflous, but most people included it anyway.

BTW, I have never heard the term 'first personal' used, but I did quit CB early on

It only attracted my attention since that is the way you usually misspell my name. I don't think it is unreasonable asking if I am the one being accused. You seem to have attracted a whole new set of friends lately and I don't think they are all associated with any net.

The interesting thing about being a professional is that you have things that must be accomplished and it is up to you how they get done. It isn't like being an alarm tech second class where you have to be directed all the time. The down side is you are expected to do what ever it takes to accomplish the programmatic goals so you get to work a lot of free overtime.

This little outburst about my work etc. makes it very clear to me why people don't like to use their names when dealing with you.
I just asked if you were talking bout me and you make an assusation of misfeasance. Perhaps I will have to acquire a screen name to deal with you.

Actually Tim I don't know why you are so obsessed with screen names anyway after all you have quite a few yourself.
Isn't sauce for the goose sauce for the gander.

Hmmm, that sure is news to me and I'm sure the frequency coordinators as well as the FCC!

I don't know the guys reason for asking for help, but at least we could try to supply truthful answers. This is as far from the truth as you can get.

Being involved with radio both in the amateur spectrum as well as commercial for a few years, I tend to keep pretty close tabs on the rules. I don't claim to know it all, but I do have my faithful resources to fall back on when I don't know the answer.

Maybe this was due to your view of things, I don't know, but if you were playing Hollywood Squares, and he agreed, he'd not get the square.

Check your local area for a Frequency Coordinator. The ARRL Repeater Directory has info for different sections of the US & Canada. Check with your local f.c. who will assign you a rare unused frequency pair.

Howdy Neighbors,

The NCDXF beacon system is an awesome resource. It's also lots of fun.
http://www.ncdxf.org/beacon.htm

We provide a download able software app called Active Beacon Wizard ++, or ABW++ to help listeners make easier use of the beacon network.

ABW++ displays the currently active NCDXF beacon over a topographic map, along with the solar terminator. Tools for setting the system clock, via the net, are also provided.

ABW++ will download and display selected, totaling 14, Space Environment Center (SEC) solar reports and forecasts. In addition, ABW++ provides the comprehensive SEC glossary of solar terrestrial terms. This glossary, along with report explanations, is provided in windows-help-file format and may be of use when interpreting the propagation reports and forecasts.

ABW++ requires win95 or later.

Look for the "Active Beacon Wizard ++" link at the URL below.

Many years ago when FM repeaters were getting popular the Ham community (especially supported by the ARRL and other organizations) developed a "band plan" for the VHF and UHF frequencies. These were "gentlemen's agreements" and have been modified several times as the usage grew and technology improved. In recent history, the FCC has tended to support these plans and has pretty well supported the decisions made by the volunteer coordination councils even though they are not directly authorized by the FCC. The "standard" repeater (and simplex) frequencies are published in several books and I suspect can be also found on the www... try the ARRL web site <http://www.arrl.org/>... for one. If you want a repeater frequency you apply to you local coordinating council (contact the ARRL via Email; they can tell you who to contact). If there are any available frequencies you will be assigned one. Some bands are pretty full up right now though, especially 2 meters. I think you may be able to read the Part 97 rules on the FCC's site <http://www.fcc.gov/wtb/amateur/>

One word, because frequencies are not assigned by the FCC directly, you cannot guarantee no interference even if you are assigned a frequency. First, due to the demands for frequencies there may be other repeaters on your frequency a few hundred miles away which under some conditions you may hear. Second, amateurs between you and the other repeaters may inadvertently bring up your machine while actually working the other repeater. Third, in the case of malicious interference it is a long process to document the problem and get the FCC to react due to their limited enforcement staff. They have taken action in several cases but many others still exist. I guess the system is not perfect. 73 Bill

So don't look catching a sight of "SLOPE HEAD" walking to the store for his beer and sex books. He is cowered under his computer reaching up and posting with his pudgey fingers.

I often see people type "okay" out... this is a term used by hams frequently as you know, on CW and phone.

But in text to type OKAY like the ARRL has on its site in fine print in some places is wrong.

It originally was a nickname (then campaign slogan) for Martin Van Buren known as "Old Kinderhook". Thus if you voted for him, you were an "O.K." man.

Unlike Clinton supporters who we refer to as "liberal bureaucratic neo-communists with additional fascist tendencies," which will not catch on in ham radio or in public life.

Howdy,

You are invited to my non-commercial, sometimes boring, hopefully useful, and always-undergoing-updates website. The URL is http://hfradio.org and features:

- DX information, including QSL Route/Manager Lookups and Callbook Lookups
- Propagation Center including the eAlert service (allows you to sign up an email address to the automated email propagation reports)
- Equidistant Azimuth Map software (allows you to create maps of any QTH)
- Swap and Shop
- Bookstore (I've hand-picked over a thousand book titles on radio, etc.)
- Free website space for YOU to create your own Ham or SWL site

There's more. Easy to navigate. Open for suggestions. And there's no "light left on for ya" -- since there's no need for a light. If you feel up to it, after looking around the site, drop me a note (you'll find my address on the site) and share your thoughts.

Roger,
All you can do is sit there and try to insult us, but the fact is you keep using the same tactic over and over, and quite frankly, you are boring us to tears. can't you come up with something original?!? If you want to get in here and mix it up a bit, fine, sling some shit. We beg you to please make it a little more challenging. Really, having it out with you is like boxing with a girl!

First, you start with an insult. Usually something dull like "getbackkk wrote...", then you make some kind of potty mouth coment about them or their XYL.

After that, you usually close with some lame one-liner like "...the last time I saw something that looked like him, I flushed it down the toilet."

Your entire attack is based on nothing. You haven't seen anyone's wife selling blowjobs and I doubt that you have ever seen getback well enough to pass judgement on his looks. However, those of us that enjoy attacking you have tangible proof that you are a great big whimp! You were the one that huddled behind the blinds pussy boy.

Ask around. There is probably a frequency coordinator in your region. Apply for a pair through that group. The FCC does not assign individuals or organizations frequency pairs but rather leaves that up to the coordinators and individuals good judgement. Do not and I emphasize DO NOT put a repeater on the air without going through this process. If your interfere with a coordinated repeater and fail to resolve the problem, then the FCC may get involved and order your repeater off the air. The anguish is just not worth it.

Howdy,

You are invited to my non-commercial, sometimes boring, hopefully useful, and always-undergoing-updates website. The URL is http://hfradio.org and features DX information, including QSL Route/Manager Lookups and Callbook Lookups; Propagation Center including the eAlert service (allows you to sign up an email address to the automated email propagation reports); Equidistant Azimuth Map software (allows you to create maps of any QTH); Swap and Shop; Bookstore (I've hand-picked over a thousand book titles on radio, etc.); Free website space for YOU to create your own Ham or SWL site, and there's more. Easy to navigate. Open for suggestions. And there's no "light left on for ya" -- since there's no need for a light. If you feel up to it, after looking around the site, drop me a note (you'll find my address on the site) and share your thoughts.

My recently-purchased service manual and application notes (and the majority of mod-your-own pages on the Web) imply that it's possible to receive 800-1000 MHz on my TH-79A. Rumors vary from encouraging (just a matter of selecting the right destination config on the diodes) to discouraging (RX parts aren't on the board and have to be installed with SMT tools) .. anyone have any reliable information on this? I have work-related reasons to use 945-1000 MHz receive, even if it is only narrowband FM, and am willing to at least entertain the idea of putting in the 800 MHz parts. There's a hardware mod involved, because F-LOW doesn't do anything on 440. And no, I couldn't be less interested in the cellphone band ..

True, but Roger is a sick man, Mr. Getback, sir.

Roger has a obsession with homosexuals.
He also has a thing for hurting those he don't know like my Christine, who I cherish very much.

Roger, Doc, Tim-KK7HO all have a thing for attacking things they don't understsnd.

KV4FZ has been an active amateur radio operator since 1954 when he was first licensed in the Midwest as W0VXO. While working his way through college (1960-64), he spent summers teaching at several camps for the physically handicapped. He was highly successful in teaching seriously disabled campers about the potential of amateur radio. Many of these campers went on to fully qualify for their amateur radio licenses.

His father, W.B. Schoenbohm, was the founder of Courage Center in Minneapolis. Herb was a major force in pushing for the initiation of the Handi-Ham program, which is now widely recognized as the premier service organization for disabled radio amateurs. After college, Herb worked as a international sales representative for Gates Radio, Harris Corp, and Collins Radio. He sold and distributed broadcast equipment to the international market, primarily Latin America. In 1968, he moved to the U.S. Virgin Islands with the intent of better serving his customers. His wife Monika was, at that time. a service representative for Pan AmericanAirways. KV4FZ was very active in DX work and, as a frequent traveler, put many new countries on 160 meters. He was instrumental in getting Stew Perry, W1BB, the necessary countries to be the first ham ever to get DXCC on 160 meters. He also gave G3IOR the last country he need (VP2EFZ, Anguilla) for the first ever DXCC via satellite (Oscar 7).

During the 1970's, KV4FZ was able to set CQ World Wide records 160-10 in almost ever category except 40 meters. He was also very active in supporting the IARU Intruder Watch after encountering frequent yachts in the area that had acquired licenses of convenience for a fee. At that time, FCC Commissioner Margita White appointed KV4FZ as the Virgin Islands SECC. The SECC has responsibility to plan and manage the operation of radio communications resources during island emergencies. Herb fulfilled that role magnificently and was named a Virgin Island "Hero" after Hurricane Hugo destroyed most of St. Croix in 1989. Herb received this award for keeping vital communications circuits open during the crisis.) Herb also took a detailed interest in how most of these "pirates" has a close association with the so-called "service nets" on the top end of 20 meters. He joined the net and attended several of the hamfest functions. Only then did he learn how deliberate and sordid was the manner in which net members misused the amateur spectrum as a means to provide an international telephone toll by-pass service. One of the most flagrant of all these operations was the "INTERCON" network operating, for the most part, on 14.313 MHz. Herb began detailed monitoring of their operation and intercepted many communications that were appalling to say the least. In 1979, KV4FZ listening to what appeared to be a "business connection" between WB6MID/8R1 in Jonestown, Guyana and WB6MID in Ukia, California.
Herb broke in and informed the net personnel that this type of operation on an amateur frequency was illegal. Furthermore, Herb stated that their communication constituted international business communications related to funds transfers and the procurement of equipment and supplies. The net hierarchy reacted by excoriating him for his "embarrassing comments" and ignoring the violations. The net bluntly told him that the Jonestown Operation was a missionary group and that they had special permission from the Carter administration to use ham radio to further their "worthy cause". Herb persisted with his concern and was quickly declared 'PERSONNA NON GRATA" by Robert Sternberg, AA4EE, a tax attorney who claimed to be the nets legal advisor. Herb expressed his concerns to other net operators participating in the companion "Maritime Mobile Net" such as Dick Eastman, N5FX and Mike Galego, KA4MUJ. Several Maritime Net members agreed that some of the more criminal practices, such as one ringers and "maintenance charges" for providing long distance toll free connections practically anywhere in the world, must be curtailed.

Some of the net cabal hierarchy rebuffed all attempts to institute reform and a nasty power struggle ensued. Eastman and Galego were "ex-communicated" by Ruth Hoffman N4LMC, Eddie Ricca K4PT and Art Candell N4PCK. The latter began a propaganda campaign, replete with false stories and personal attacks, that promised to destroy any net opposition that sought reform. The net members objected to the lively participation of KV4FZ, KA4MUJ, and N5FX (a former net director) who frequently brought to the attention of net participants certain stations whose conduct violated the FCC and International Rules.

During the 1980's, net members began a campaign of coordinated complaints to the FCC claiming that the aforementioned three were causing willful and malicious interference to the net. N5FX and KV4FZ both received prefabricated FCC citations at the behest of the net command. Both were able to get the FCC to nullify their actions based on the fact that their constructive comments did not constitute "malicious interference" and that certain members of the net themselves were engaged in a premeditated campaign of harassment and interference.

Several members of the net were subsequently caught interfering with the communications of KV4FZ and KA4MUJ. They include K2BFI and AA5LY. AA5LY later gave the FCC, and supporters of KV4FZ and KA4MUJ, a complete and accurate accounting of the plot by disgruntled net members to "settle the score". That plan included a vigorous campaign of letter writing to politicians in Washington in an attempt to pressure them into punishing the net detractors.

N4PCK had his own reason to get even. He had known Herb while he was operating in Haiti as HH2A and was very active on the INTERCON net. Herb had learned, through his contacts in Haiti, that Candell had a serious problem. He would solicit young pre-teen boys and pay them a quarter to perform sex acts on him. A prominent Haitian administrator was told, by his son, that the young boy had been abused and sodomized by Candell. There was no arrest or trial. But the arrival of the outraged local citizenry at Candell's hillside villa dictated that Candell receive an armed escort to the airport. Candell then appeared in the Orlando, Fl area, illegally using the call HH2A/W4 and actively engaging in net activities. The net watchdogs, now known as the B.A.R.F. (The Better Amateur Radio Federation), pointed out that Candell was not eligible to use a Haitian call sign in the United States unless he was a Haitian citizen and had been granted a proper permit from the FCC.

Again the net members supported Candell and sought to silence Herb. However, the FCC ruled that Candell could no longer operate from Florida unless he obtained a valid U.S. amateur radio license. Candell later paid off a VEC in Silver Springs, Fl to fraudulently give him a passing grade on a General Class license examination. The VEC was later sanctioned but Candell was neither removed from the air nor required to be re-examined. In 1989 Candell was finally arrested and convicted of multiple incidents of child molestation. He was given a suspended sentence that was partially based upon INTERCON's assertion that he had been rehabilitated by amateur radio service in their net. (Candell was arrested and convicted again in 1994 for carnal assault on several boys between 8 and 10 years of age whom he had invited into home under the pretense of showing them his ham station. He has been institutionalized for several years but his ham license was, nonetheless, renewed in 1996 for another ten years.)
In 1990, Candell continued with his plot to destroy and discredit KV4FZ in retaliation for Herb's alleged "interference" with the net's "business". Candell actively leagued with other enemies of KV4FZ such as Pat Miller, KP2J in St. Thomas, and Richard Whiten, WB2OTK. Miller supplied Whiten the so-called "proof" of a crime by playing a recorded tape on both 20 and 75 meters. Miller introduced Candell to the operator of a long distance resale service that KV4FZ briefly subscribed to in 1987. Some of the users of the CALLS (Caribbean Automated Long Line Service) system (a six digit access code system on which half the possible combinations of digits gained the caller access to a WATTS line) had been illegally abusing the CALLS scheme. Malcolm Ford had claimed losses to the tune of $200,000 and needed a scapegoat. Thereupon, it was decided that a criminal case should be manufactured against Herb, KV4FZ.

Ford needed this falsification to support his ludicrous claim that the impending bankruptcy of CALLS was not due to his inept management. Instead, it proffered that somehow Herb had caused his business to fail. This was vital to Ford because he was still salaried as the GM of CALLS even though they were in receivership. Ford's efforts failed and he was physically removed from the operation after the Federal Bankruptcy judge found him raiding the treasury and assets of CALLS.

However, all during this time, Ford was fabricating evidence in an attempt to establish a connection between CALLS financial failure and KV4FZ. Yet the Department of Justice continually refused to prosecute Herb. This resulted in even more acrimonious letters to officials and politicians in a further attempt to implicate Herb as the culprit.

Malcolm Ford, the previous owner of CALLS, was then under investigation for bankruptcy fraud. In an attempt to escape indictment, Ford hired John Ackley, KP2A, to fabricate various reports that would designate Vitelco(a local phone service), STSJ Long Lines, ITT and Herb as coconspirators who were attempting run him out of business. While this was going on, Ackley was attempting to buy the nearly defunct company for ten cents on the dollar. (Ackley failed but STSJ was able to get the company back on its feet.) Miller, Hoffman, Candell and others intensified their letter writing campaign to hundreds of politicians in Washington urging them to investigate. They even began writing letters to newspapers, claiming that politicians were shielding KV4FZ from prosecution. In these hate letters to public officials, Herb was equated with organized crime, drug trafficking, and high level political corruption. In 1991, KV4FZ was writing a hard-hitting column for the St. Croix Avis newspaper. Herb frequently attacked political corruption so it stood to reason that he might have some enemies in government. Herb had articles published about the check kiting and House Banking fraud perpetrated by the Virgin Island Delegate to Congress, Ron Delugo. Outraged and distraught, Delugo (who had designs upon becoming the next governor of the Virgin Islands) assigned a full time staff attorney (Sylvester Julian) to explore methods of pressuring the FCC, the Secret Service, and the Department of Justice into investigating Herb and "putting a 'severe hurting' on him".

However an obstacle remained in the path of their plan to annihilate KV4FZ. Some at the FCC supported Herbs activities on behalf of the amateur radio service. Additionally he was elected as Vice Chairman of the Virgin Islands Republican Committee, which made him a frequent delegate to the GOP Conventions. Furthermore, Herb was personally acquainted with President Bush. Herb's father had served on the President's Commission for the Handicapped.

Initially, each and every involved agency claimed there was not enough evidence to support a charge against Herb. Subsequent to this, John Ackley, KP2A, manufactured a list of 660 telephone calls that were prearranged to add up to $1,047 in value. This was exactly forty-seven dollars over the amount needed to achieve the threshold of prosecution. Delugo wrote threatening letters to various government agencies threatening that he would see to it that their funding was severely curtailed if he did not receive figuratively receive Herb's head on a silver platter. Ruth Hoffman constantly badgered the acting U.S. Attorney for the Virgin Islands, Terri Halpern. This continued to the point that Hoffman was finally ordered to stop harassing Halpern. However, as a Congressman to the VI, Delugo was in a position convince colleagues not to block Halpern's confirmation. Delugo reportedly told Halpirn that, unless she prosecuted Herb Schoenbohm, she would never become U.S. Attorney. (Halprin was fired in 1992 by the DOJ for ethical lapses after the Office of Professional Responsibility investigated the severe criticism, from the 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals, that Halpern received for the "knowing use of false evidence" to secure a conviction. Nevertheless, the trial prosecutor was cleared by OPR because they were unable to prove that the prosecutor actually knew the evidence used was false.)

Herb's trial took place in April 1991 (four months past the five-year statute of limitations). Both Ackley and Miller testified, under oath, as to the veracity and accuracy of the incriminating evidence they had assisted in concocting. (Miller offered his so-called "caught in the act" tape of Herb dialing "illegal access codes". Ackley presented his list of random numbers that he verified, as a government expert witness, were all telephone numbers dialed by defendant Schoenbohm.

The puzzled and confused jury convicted Herb on all three counts of Title 18, SS 1029(a): 1,2 and 3, which is, in reality, an illegal credit card statute. This statute has been used infrequently to curb the illegal use of cloned cellular telephones. After trial, Schoenbohm with the help of Bob Sheron, W4ASX, closely scrutinized the evidence and began tracking down the parties that Ackley had claimed, under oath, that Herb had illegally called. A most amazing discovery unfolded: most of the persons contacted did not know Herb Schoenbohm or had never had a telephone conversation with him. Amazingly, they had already given statements confirming this fact to the Secret Service investigators. Most had even identified persons, other than Schoenbohm, whom had called them from the Virgin Islands during the timeframe in question (1987). Interestingly, the court refused to allow Schoenbohm to verify the numbers before trial.

The court incredibly claimed that it needed to protect the potential witnesses from pre-trial disclosure! After trial, armed with affidavits from the persons alleged to have received Herb's "illegal" calls, Herb moved for a Judgment of Acquittal not withstanding the jury verdict. The court granted the motion on all counts but one (Possession or Use of a Counterfeit Access Device). The court maintained that the Miller tape proved that something was amiss and the jury could correctly deduce from this that the law had been broken. This court decision differs from the previous decision in that the device is similar to, but not exactly the same as, a valid device and does not require the threshold of over $1000 in use. (The irony in this entire matter is that Herb freely admitted to using the service briefly in 1987. He was a bona fide customer and the total actual use amounted to $106. CALLS finally was required by the court to produce Herb's check for $104 that they had received in1987. They admitted that they did not cash the check but, instead, held it as an aid in the plot to entrap KV4FZ.) When the court vacated the judgment requiring two months prison time, Herb's detractors were enraged and, once again, began the political letter writing campaign. Now the claim was that Herb had used amateur radio in the commission of a crime and should be taken off the air. They sent the highly doctored Miller Tapes to the FCC in an attempt to prove their incredible theory. Their letters were full of outrage over the fact that Herb had once more cheated Madam Guillotine and he still on the air making waves. Some were furious due to the fact that they had given financial support to certain political candidates and nothing permanent had been done to rid the airwaves of this "pest", KV4FZ. (Ruth Hoffman even conveyed gifts to officials at the FCC in attempt to bribe public servants. One such official, William Cross, was investigated for leaking internal information to Ruth Hoffman in the KV4FZ matter. Hoffman then disseminated this information for use in the hate campaign against Herb.)

KV4FZ then was subsequently forced to embark upon a long and costly struggle for justice. He has had to fight the refusal to renew his amateur license by demanding a hearing before the FCC. (The refusal to renew is rarely used as a procedure and has been given the title: "The FCC Death Penalty" because the entire burden of proof is placed upon the licensee.)

At the first FCC hearing, Administrative Law Judge Luton ruled against KV4FZ. However, upon higher review, the FCC General Counsel refused to accept Judge Luton's findings and remanded the matter for reconsideration. The principle issue is whether or not KV4FZ had used amateur radio in the furtherance of the commission of a crime. This time the ALJ ruled that there was nothing in the evidence (The Miller Tape) that was illegal in any way. The concluded that Schoenbohm actually was dialing ordinary and valid Virgin Islands telephone numbers. He was not entering illicit access codes to make long distance calls.

The ALJ did, however, agree with the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau (WTB) assertion that, by giving out the telephone number, in 1994, of Herb's future boss, Congressman Frazer (whom, incidentally ran Delugo out of office), Herb was violating a solicitation restriction of ex-parte rules. This was despite the fact that WTB had conceded that no actual ex-parte violation had taken place. The ALJ ruled that, by attempting to explain his conviction as a De Minimus violation rather than a crime of major impact, he was trying to mislead the trial of fact. (In administrative law, the assertion of innocence is a crime even if the accused is actually innocent! It is akin to Hobson's Choice or the Salem witch trials whereupon, if the tied woman is thrown into the pond, and she does not drown, then she must surely be a witch and, thus, must be burned to death.

Herb had been fighting the remaining count through the Federal Courts and has even succeeded in convincing the courts to severely criticize the DOJ for their handling of the case. Nevertheless, they refused to reverse the remaining conviction because of the nearly impossible to define "standard of harmless error". The appellate court ruled that the motion for Judgment of Acquittal had been filed too late even though the trial judge had granted an extension based on the emergence of irrefutable proof that the prosecution had used false evidence. As a result they were barred from considering the sufficiency of evidence matter at this late date under the rigorous standards of Habeas Corpus review. However, a positive revelation in the latest FCC decision is that it clearly vindicates Herb on the original charge of using ham radio in the commission of a crime. It also conclusively proves that his detractors engaged in perjury before a Federal Grand Jury and Petit Jury trial.

Many on the local scene recognized the truth. The Trial Judge, The Honorable Ann Thompson, wrote a letter of support and praise on Herb's behalf. The Governor of the Virgin Islands did not simply restore Herb's government career. He elevated Herb to a position of higher authority with more responsibility to the island and a significantly higher salary. He was also employed, as a part-time field representative, on the congressional staff of newly elected Congressman Frazer.

The FCC WTB attorneys characterized these as "political jobs", unworthy of consideration as a mitigating factor in Herb's "rehabilitation"!) Although Herb had a Congressional Floor Pass, granting him direct access to the ears of the politicians, there is no evidence that he ever abused his position to lobby House members against the FCC. This is in spite of the fact that the bureaucrats inside the FCC are very much afraid that Herb might just whisper in the ear of someone who controls their finances. Because of this, Herb is not allowed to take his case to the very people who would be horrified to learn the truth about how he has been treated. These are the people who could finally put a stop to this travesty of justice. Yet, Herb's detractors are on the phone daily, pushing those in power to get him off the air, one way or another. When will the voice of reason and justice be heard?

Some of us do not like the odds and are willing to help end this fiasco. Herb's legal bills are soaring but he continues the fight. His attorney, Larry Colby (a licensed ham), has stated that when this issue gets into the proper arena, Herb will be totally vindicated. But this can only happen if Herb is allowed to fight on and get his case into the proper arena. Right now, it is still in a forum where all the rules are stacked against the licensee. When the matter gets out of the FCC, and into the D.C. Circuit Court, then the playing field is closer to being balanced. There, the Feds don't have the automatic upper hand that allows them to do what their political puppet-masters demand.

A small donation of $25, $50 or $100 will go a long way in continuing the fight for justice. There is an underlying principle that must be preserved. It is not keeping Herb on the air that drives his supporters. It is the realization that if they can deprive KV4FZ of justice then they can deprive any of us of justice. Today they are persecuting KV4FZ. Tomorrow it could be you. You could be railroaded just because somebody doesn't agree with your position on the nets, phone patching, or apple pie. Herb is working vigorously to get the funds together for his appeal. His attorney Larry Colby is attempting to get an extension of time to file exceptions. If you can help in anyway, please contact John Dillenger, K4GFM, who is the custodian of the Defense Fund.

And so should you!

The purpose of this page is to inform the general public and amateur community about the tragedy, immorality, and criminality that is leading to the downfall of the greatest nation in the history of the world and that being The United States of America. Liberty Net supporters also want to expose the evil agenda of the spin doctors and puppet masters who want to destroy the United States and the God-given Constitution and Bill of Rights enjoyed by the people. We also want to expose the atrocities occuring in amateur radio by various undesirable and degenerate characters who have a political agenda and violate the rights of others in addition to the rules. Our grouping is not ran by any Liberty Net member or participants for those who would see this as a page created for the benefit of the Liberty Net. This page is not the creation of a lackey or group of lackeys like our dictatorial and conspiratorial enemies would have you believe. Unfortunately, there are those critics who see this page as a creation of the Liberty Net and its main participants. Their assumptions are incorrect and invalid and very misinformed. This page is not directed by or affiliated with any members of the Liberty Net. We are an independent group of individuals who want to show our support for the Liberty Net and its climate of free uncontrolled speech. Unfortunately, our critics and oppressors want to shut down all avenues of free speech and expression especially political speech. These anti-freedom groups and individuals try to do this by jamming radio frequencies. These nefarious characters also spam newsgroups and the email accounts of countless people for no legitimate reason. However, we will continue the fight against those forces of darkness who want to oppress the general public and amateur community into their global plantation in which rights will be granted by the state if any are granted. However, those rights will be severely limited and destroyed by our common enemies and oppressors who want to enslave our nation and its people in chains. Let's fight back and break free from these tyrants and their nefarious plans for our people.

Those are our objectives and we want your support to restore Constitutional freedoms and the Bill of Rights to their original intention. The Liberty Net does not support hatred toward any group except for those who are propagating their evil and anti-American system onto the people by deception and cunning trickery. However, the Liberty Net has been smeared as a hate group by various problematic characters whose lives reek of degeneracy, lies, agendas, and immorality. These individuals often have skeletons in their own closets as well as various misdeeds. Their actions are not only illegal but immoral and unjust while those hypocrites claim to be fighting for the public good. However, they are working for their own agenda which is contrary to the interest of informed and concerned individuals. Liberty Net supporters want to expose these characters to the fullest extent and show the world who the real haters and deceivers are. We need to expose their evil plans and agendas which are hell bent on destroying our nation and Constitutional guarantees of freedom. The Liberty Net does not want to overthrow the government but believes that we need to reform the government back to its original state. That original state was envisioned and acted upon by the Founding Fathers and signers of the Constitution. The Liberty Net group and resulting supporters want a reform of the system to remove the unneccessary, expensive, and unconstitutional bureaucracy which has grown tentacles during this century. The often illegal and unconstitutional bureaucracy has worked to usurp the rights of the people and to enslave them spiritually, economically, politically, socially, and mentally.

However, various unsavory forces and characters are working in unison to achieve their goals of an undemocratic socialist state that is anti-American and unconstitutional. The state would be much like the former Soviet Union, Red China, Vietnam, North Korea, or other dictatorships of the proletariat. The biggest killer of this century has not been disease or famine. The biggest killer has been at the hands of the state and at the hands of socialists and communists. These assorted socialists and communists have killed hundreds of millions of people just like you or me. For example, under Chairman Mao Zedong, Communist China is estimated to have killed 100 million of its own people between 1934 and 1971. Executions, forced labor, torture, godlessness, abortion, political murders, arrests, mass murder and genocide and worse are characteristics of these states. Who can forget the mass famine and murders which took place in the Ukraine and much of the USSR during the 1930's. This terror famine killed 30 to 40 million people and was largely responsible at the hands of the Soviet Communist leadership led by Josef Stalin. However, only the Jewish Holocaust is discussed in the general public while 6 million people were killed in Germany. Even the numbers of six million have been under debate for years by various people. Were not trying to downplay the effects of Hitler and the Nazi party but rather show that there have been much worse episodes during world history. However, international communism and socialism has killed far more than six million. The events in Germany during the 1930's and 1940's were not good for humanity either and we're not trying to downplay them. However, let's look at the toll which international communism and socialism has had on humanity. Hundreds of millions have under communist control and brutal dictatorships ruled by goons and social degenerates who are greedy and hate freedom.

In reality, a communist and a socialist are the same thing in true doctrine and belief. The main difference is that a communist uses violence and wants to achieve the socialism dreamed by Marx faster. Socialism takes time by usurping freedom by the use of methods in order to scare and concern the people into accepting government control. They often use the ruse of public safety by promising safety while cajoling the people to give up and increasing amount of rights until they totally achieve socialistic control over all aspects of human existence. Communists advocate violent revolution and purges to attain their goals while socialists try to use semi-democratic means such as mass media control and sham democracy in which voters lack a choice and a voice. Socialists and communists support the same thing and use nefarious means against the people in order to attain their goals of dictatorship of a few. They support state control of all facets of life including industry, agriculture, communications, transportation, social life, culture, and all other things that are free in the United States.

Now let's look at what comprises a hate group. The phrase hate group is used widely by the corporate controlled internationalist media as a way to smear the opposition. What they do is to smear a certain group in order to advance their own agenda which is often against the wishes of the people. They do this in order to scare the public and keep them from thinking uncontrolled thoughts that are not approved of by the Establishmentarian bureaucracy and its supporters. Let's look at why these unsavory individuals and groups are doing this to our nation and many others. Most are doing their smear campaigns and blacklisting in order to support their internationalist agendas. These agendas and ideas are contrary to the desires and wishes of people in the United States and across the world. These individuals are paid by various groups and individuals in order to control their thoughts and actions dealing with important facets of human life. The individuals who fund these programs include business tycoons, corporations, bankers, insurance companies, and other groups. In order to control the public mindset and keep the masses in line they have worked successfully to control the main molder of public opinion. That main organ of molding public opinion is called the mass media. The facts are that twelve of the largest corporations in the world control the American news media and resulting media organizations. For example, the Time Warner company owns CNN and other entertainment corporations. The pro-homosexual and degenerate Disney Corporation owns ABC Television and Radio as well theme parks, publishers, magazines, and other organs of public media. NBC is controlled by General Electric. CBS is controlled by a large armaments manufacturer which gets large government contracts for wars. More than a few wars have been fought for the benefit of the war contractors greedy gains knowingly by our supposed leaders. They sent your sons to slaughter fighting other peoples war. Does anyone see anything wrong with this picture? It looks to me that there is a high level of media concentration in television, radio, communcations, newspapers, periodicals, magazines, childrens books, adult books, and other communications media material. Therefore, we have a problem with a small group of corporations and individuals controlling the major places where the American people get their news and information. Is that why Shortwave and alternative communications are doing well in many fields. It shows that the American people in many cases are seeing through the walls that surround them and that is the corporate media. Is it no wonder that these people are in support of internationalism and other nefarious plans? Why is it that they call those opposed to their plans a hate group. It is a way of smearing the groups and using it as a scare tactic to the general public not to support these groups. These scare tactics are just like the current politcal correctness debates that have been going on for years. Political correctness is a violation of free speech and free though. In reality, political correctness does not benefit society because it disallows the people the right to think and say what they feel. That is a violation of the Constitution and Bill of Rights and is downright fascism and communism. However, these people who support political correctness are often supporters of liberal,communist, and socialist agendas which are detrimental to the well being and interests of the people.

OH YOU DO?? is it just one or two members or everyone in the damn net?? LOL
What's Christine say about that? Or does she even mind.

Leave it to LLOYD DAVIES to "Plagiarize" someone else's work. DAVIES WHY do you "SPAM" this NG by putting the "contents" of "Someone else's" webpage in here. You could have just posted the link and saved the bandwidth. Next the Alabama HYPOCRITE (Davies) will be telling someone else NOT TO SPAM. LOL
USE your brain DAVIES and think of something "original." you know, your own work, or thoughts. Stop Spamming. AOL does have rules aginst that. LOL

DAVIES (n0vfp@aol.com) spewed and copy, cut and pasted

Here Lloyd DAVIES SPAMMED this NG with not one "original" thought of his own.
he copy cut and pasted someone else's web page contents in this NG. That's Blatant Spam DAVIES and again AOL has rules against that. One more time! Post something original, your own work or thoughts. are you capable of that? i doubt it.
anyone one wishing to report this it's mailto:abuse@aol.com

So is defence. Yet we don't have a Department of Defence.

Since hams like to elaborate on simple terms ("the first personal here is" instead of "my name is") the typing out of the phonetic sounds of "O K" likely originated with a ham.

Have you had recent production (exp. March 2003) Sony AA batteries heat and leak when first installed ?

To the wise: yes, they were installed correctly and no, I didn't charge them, even by accident. They were in for all of 10 minutes.

Do you have a low pass filter installed inline on your transmission line?
Is your power for the station shared with the light circut in the house?

I am assuming you are running the TS50S with no amplifier and I believe it is around 100 watts or so out.

What kind of power supply are you using??

My guess as to whats happening, is you are pulling your house current voltage down when you key the transmitter. You can remedy this by running a larger gauge wire from your station back to the fuse/breaker box. You may also want to consider putting your station on its own breaker and not share that circuit with anything else in your house.

There have been some reports that the Cushcraft R7000 has trap troubles at high power for the 40 meter band.

I use the Cushcraft R6000 at the KW level and have had no difficulty.

Can't speak to the other antennas.

The flickering lights are caused by Voltage (I * R) drops in the circuit that powers the lights. I f you have your own home consider a separate line for the radio shack. If you rent or live in an apartment you will have to live with the flickering <unfortunately>.

A low pass filter will not help a line voltage regulation problem.

My Kenwood TS 570D causes light flicker, but my KW amplifier, on a separate 240 v circuit does not.

Dave,
A lot of folks here bash Chushcraft, and the R7000 may deserve it, but the older R5 and R7 are decent antennas when assembled and mounted properly....you should be able to pick one up used for about $100....

Herman Hermit issued forth:

>Oxford

The omnipotent mathematician Herman hast spoken.

The philosophes themselves quake in their crypts at the prospect of your vast knowledge.

Mathematicians amaze me; they can't control the direction of their hair, so they feel they can control others' minds. I once knew a mathematician we called "spaz". He was, indeed, a spaz. His arms flew about in vast fits of agitated motion when he "enlightened" those of us who were in the humanities as to the way the body politic, English and the world outside of a beaker worked.

The popularization of this phrase in the U.S. came thanks to Van Buren.

Perchance next you'll tell us that Dixie was scribed by a Confederate ?

According to Oxford, "O.K" is U.S. slang, an abbreviation for the Middle English "oll korrect" = "all correct."

The only languages that do not experience change are the dead languages.

7252. Seeking information on Panasonic radio

Greetings!

I would very much like to get some information on a radio I used to own. It is a 1970's era Panasonic portable. I do not remember the model number. By the description I've sent to several newsgroups and radio club sites, I've been told I am describing an RF2200 or RF1150. Now that I have seen a pictures of the 2200 and the 1150, I know that it's not either of those. The radio I am looking for is very similar to the 1150, but I think the radio I had was probably less 'upscale' than the 1150.

Below is a description of the radio I am looking for:

It is a portable Panasonic AM/FM (&SW) radio manufactured in the '70s. Dimensions are about 10x10x2. It was all black and had a large (about 8-9") speaker on the "front", with volume, treble, and bass knobs on the "top" (not at the top of the front side of the radio, but on the top of the radio. I can't remember where the tuning knob was--probably on the "side"--but the analog dial was on the "top". Also, the three (?four?) position toggle switch for changing bands was on the "top". It had a sleep timer down toward the bottom on one side. I think it had a squelch control knob (somewhere--on the other side??). It also had a removable and adjustable nylon handle/shoulder strap. I think it retailed for about US$99, but this is a guess.

The main diffrence that I can tell from the picture of the 1150 and the radio I had is:

Mine had:
-no rotating ferrite bar antenna -- I think it must have had only a telescoping antenna

-most controls on the"top" and "sides"; the speaker takes up most of the surface area of the "front"

-removable nylon shoulder strap (I didn't see this in the picture but I guess that doesn't prove that the 1150 doesn't have one...)

-all black finish

I would very much appreciate any information about the radio I have described. Specifically, the model number and if possible, information about where I can see a picture of it so that I cen tell for sure that it's the one I am looking for. Once I know the model number, I can start 'shopping' for one.

ANy information you could provide would be appreciated! Thanks in advance for your assistance!

Regards,
John P. Nordbo

Dimming of lights in cadence with your Morse transmitter is a sign of IR voltage drop in your AC supply.

Try putting your ham station on it's own AC circuit, or increase the amperage of your AC mains service (or both).

Assuming that the lights in question are not flourescent lights, I think the most likely culprit is voltage drop through the wiring caused by keying your tx on. (higher current draw causes more voltage drop across the resistance of wiring/connections)

Are the lights in question on the same circuit as your transceiver?
If so, try plugging your transciever into a different circuit. It is possible that the circuit is overloaded, the wiring guage is inadequate for the run length, or that there's a bad connection (high resistance) between the main bus in your service box (where the breakers/fuses are) and the circuit you're using.
A bad connection could be as simple as a loose screw, loose breaker/fuse, etc.

If the lights are on the same circuit, it's possible that your transceiver is at/near the end of a "daisy chain". If there's a loose screw on an outlet somewhere back towards the breaker/fuse box, the higher current drain of keying your tx will cause excessive voltage drop, and thus a flickering of the lights.

If the wiring is inadequate or the circuit is overloaded, you may need to run a separate circuit with its own breaker and dedicated wiring of adequate guage

If the lights are definitely on a different circuit, your main breakers in the service box could have developed a higher than normal contact resistance, the meter contacts could be bad, or there could be bad connection or inadequate wiring between your service entrance and the distribution transformer which serves your house (and maybe your neighbors houses as well). Do the lights blink throughout your house, or just the ones on a particular circuit? Do your neighbors' lights blink at all?

I hope this helps you to troubleshoot and identify your problem.
The fact that you state your TV is OK may indicate that it's on a separate circuit from your tx, or it simply has good enough voltage regulation and large enough filter caps to not react to the line voltage drop you keying causes.

Again, this sounds like it's most likely just voltage drop ... shielding won't help that, only adequate wiring.

JUST REMEMBER ... be careful ... you're dealing with potentially lethal voltages here, so watch where you stick your fingers and make sure to hold any voltmeter probes carefully and correctly by the insulated parts and be careful not to cause any accidental shorts with them when probing around.

If a newcomer were to ask me about amateur radio and I wanted to discourage them, I would direct them to this newsgroup if they had internet access.

While I think Jeff Herman is a pompous ass, he is right about one thing: You certainly don't see this type of behavior in the lower end of the bands where phone operation is not permitted.

Mathematicians amaze me. They cannot control the direction of their hair, yet think they can tell those of us in the humanities the way the body politic, English and the world outside of a beaker work. I once knew a mathematician who we called "spaz". He was a spaz indeed, for when he spoke his arms flew into vast fits of agitated motion.

I am concerned only with the phrase and it's popular origin in this country, which occurred thanks to Martin Van Buren, Old Kinderhook.

Hello

I have done little software for PIC-processor. It reads data from Icom CI-V bus and controls 10 I/Os depending used frequency (purpose is control antenna switch, band switch in linear etc.)
It works very fine with my IC706MKII. My friend have IC725 and with that rig there is some strange problem:
Protocol of CI-V should be FE FE to-addres from-address.
My friends 725 won't understand CI-V command if from-address is something else than 28Hex, which is the same address than 725 have!?!.
Strange, isn't it?
Have anyone else found this kind of problem before?

I'll second Toms' statement about the R7000 and the older R5 and 7.
I have a 7000 lying up in the attic, brand new that isn't any good. It won"t tune any place because I don't have a vacant field with nothing in it to put the antenna in. I do have an R5 that has been up for over 8 years though. The XYL got her General class ticket around 1 1/2 years ago and has DXCC, WAS and a bunch more on it using 100 watts into it. I wouldn't sell it for 1000 bucks. The R7000 is for sale though, name a price, you all ship

If you don't mind stretching out radials, perhaps you could find a Cushcraft AP8A quarter wave vertical. I've always found that these antennas work better than (IMHO) the "gimmicky" half-waves such as the R5, R7, and R7000. The AP8A also tunes up very nicely on 75 meters (mine is tuned for 3850 to 3880 and exhibits a good < 2.00:1 SWR match over this range. Mine covers the full 40 meter General voice portion with about a 1.7:1 SWR. 20 and 15 are also good for the full band.
Mine doesn't exhibit a good match on 10 meters however. I've had my AP8A mounted on the roof and on the ground. It works very well in both places. I've been using it for about 10 years. I run a Drake 7-line station, sometimes with full legal limit. The AP8A works fine handling the power. The full instruction manual for all Cushcraft vertical antennas (including the AP8A) can be found on their web site.

I had the R5 and it is a FB antenna. To get 30 and 40m -- I replaced it with an R-7000 and it works fine. A tip on tuning --- don't have the mounting mast extend above the mounting bracket!!! Messes up the tuning big time. Mine is nestled between 3 palm trees (HOA here) which changes the tuning a bit -- but tunes all bands after readjusting -- no problem. Seems to have a nice low angle of radiation -- so have worked quite a few DX stations with it.

Wouldn't advise using a tuner to extend the bandwidth while running high power though -- some folks here have had problems doing that.

One does not use "okay" in the press. One does not use it in a formal print situation. One uses it walking down the street, at work, or in a eatery.

I'm waiting for more enforcement from the Eff See See on the Eh Are Are El site, myself...

Incidentally, here is the post:

I often see people type "okay" out... this is a term used by hams frequently as you know, on CW and phone.

But in text to type OKAY like the ARRL has on its site in fine print in some places is wrong.

It originally was a nickname (then campaign slogan) for Martin Van Buren known as "Old Kinderhook". Thus if you voted for him, you were an "O.K." man.

Unlike Clinton supporters who we refer to as "liberal bureaucratic neo- communists with additional fascist tendencies," which will not catch on in ham radio or in public life.

Greetings

We have just had a meeting at LPWS headquarters in Kidderminster, and we are undecided as to what direction to take our web site in. The general view is that it has been far more popular than we ever though possible, but we want to add new features.

Charles Penrose wants to get rid of the FRAMES to get better search engine listings, and we agreed to that. What we need is your input. We already list many links to hard to find resources, and cracks and passwords for your ripped off software. What else can we do for you?

Coming soon, old RAE papers! Subject to C&G approval, if that is not forthcoming they will be up on an alternative site and linked from http://www.laughingpoliceman.com

We are waiting for your input, hit reply or click here g8aso@hotmail.com

Greetings Dave..

Decisions, decisions! Searching the Web I came up with a few Web sites that you may want to look into..

Mosley's even getting into the act:
http://www.cqcqcq.com/vertical.html

An index to Butternut antennas is at:
http://www.bencher.com/ant_select.html
Use the pull down menu (arrow pointing down).

I've personally own and have had very good luck with the HF6V.
http://www.bencher.com/hf6vx.html

Some info. on the Gap antennas: (these have gotten some press over here but they are a LARGE (tall) antenna)
http://www.gapantenna.com/
http://www.poncede.com/newpage4.htm

Even product reviews in QST on a few of the Gap antennas:
http://www.arrl.org/ncj/index/prodrev.html

After mounting and (unfortunately) owning a few Cushcraft products, I can honestly say that, at least in the past, their antennas were the most flimsy antennas that I've ever come across. Further, attempting to get parts for their antennas they no longer sell can be - if not impossible nearly so.. I've had conversations with amateurs waiting for parts from them on the order of months. However, I will say, good deals can be made for used antennas from any manufacture. I just personally won't consider their products in the future. They're the YUGO of antenna manufactures.

Cheers,
Gary

You are correct except for the R7000. It is GREATLY improved over the previous vertical as far as strength goes.
It can be HELL to get it to work on all bands though and they do try to help you but in the end, you are VERY lucky if you get good SWR on all the bands.
That may be true of all the verticals, not sure?

9A, CROATIAN ISLANDS (IOTA and IOCA activity). Frane/9A5V, Matko/9A3VM, and Fredi/9A5KV, who activated the island of Kolocep (which counts as CI-038 for Croatian IOCA Award) this past weekend, will activate the island of Lopud (CI-057) September 24-26th. By the way, both islands are also valid for the IOTA award too (as EU-016). Activity will be on all bands. QSL to home callsign. Some may remember Frane was active in the 1999 IOTA contest as 9A2FK/p from the island Sipan (CI-120, JN82WR). He made some 800+ QSOs.

9H, MALTA. Wilko, PA3BWK, will be active as 9H3R now until October 1st. He states that most of his activity will be 20 kHz from the lower band edges. No QSNs were reported as this bulletin was being prepared. QSL via PA3CBU or via bureau.

9M6, EAST-MALAYSIA. Brett, VR2BG, will be on active as 9M6BG now until October 4th. His activity will be CW on 160-6 meters including the WARC bands. Over the past weekend Brett was heard on 20/17/15/12 meters between 2300-0400z.

C6, BAHAMAS. Look for Gary/KI6T, Glenn/WR6O and Salvatore/KA6WHA to be active as homecall/C6A between October 26th and November 1st. They will all be active as C6AGS in the CQWW SSB Contest as a Multi/Single entry. QSL C6AGS via KI6T.

E4, PALESTINE. Ayar, OZ6ACD, will be active as E44/OZ6ACD from Hebron again. The length of his activity is unknown at this time. No QSNs have been reported as this bulletin was being prepared, but his operation was to have started as of September 17th. QSL via OZ1ACB.

HI, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC. "The 59(9) DXReport" reports that Julio, AD4Z, will be active between November 26th and December 3rd as HI3JH. Also, look for him as HI3K in the CQWW CW Contest. QSL via AD4Z.

IOTA NEWS.....
AS-041. Takeshi, JI3DST, will be active as JI3DST/4 from Oki Archipelago (Oki-Gun Shimane), beginning at 0800z September 23rd, lasting until 2200z September 25th. Activity will be on 17/15/12/10 meters (40/80 meters SSB for JA). QSL via the JARL Bureau or direct to: Takeshi Funaki, 2-18-26 Hannan-Cho Abeno-Ku, Osaka-City Osaka 545-0021 Japan.

AS-100. Jan, 4X1VF, reports that he will lead a group of hams to operate from Akhziv Island, October 23rd. They will use the callsign 4Z0A. NA-148. Tony/WF1N and Lou/W1DIG had to cancel their operation scheduled for Sept. 17-20th due to Hurricane Floyd. Storm surges would have made landing difficult and/or unsafe even after "Floyd" has passed! They cannot reschedule the operation until next year.

LU, ARGENTINA. LU4FM will be active in the next CQWW RTTY Contest as a Multi/Multi entry. This will be the first RTTY contest from this station.

Dale/N3BNA (V26A), Darrell/AB2E (V26E), Jorge/CX6VM (CX5X), and Juan/ZP5MAL will activate Juan's contest callsign ZP6T on his farm near Asuncion for the contest. The plans call for some ops to be in ZP from November 20th until December 6th. Also, look for ZP6/N3BNA who will enter in the ARRL 160M Contest. An inverted L for 160 meters, with beverages will be added as well as a new 40 meters yagi to Juan's world-class antenna farm. Also, planned to be added is a 3 element wire yagi identical to the one built at the V26B site and designed by WX0B. Because ZP is considerably rare on CW, much attention will be paid before and after the contest to work the highest open WARC band. Also, attempts will be made frequently on 160/80 meters CW after the CQWW Contest. QSL info is as follows: ZP6/AB2E via AB2E, ZP6/N3BNA via WB3DNA, and ZP6/CX6VM via W3HNK. Do NOT QSL ZP6T via W3HNK.

Consider building a vertical yourself. Dozens of articles have appeared over the years in the various magazines and books. I just randomly pulled a book of the shelf (ARRL's Understanding Amateur Radio) and found an article on constructing a vertical, using three 10-foot aluminum sections, each with a tapered end to fit snugly into the next; sheet metal screws would insure a good electrical contact over time. A 30-foot vertical with lots of ground radials will load up on any band (except maybe 160), using a tuner.

As a young pup, I loaded up a (grounded) street light pole using a gamma match. Worked the world with it and 25 watts (CW, of course).

Don't be surprised that you can turn out home-brewed gear that will rival the performance of commercially-built equipment. Plus, the knowledge you'll gain will be priceless. (And you'll have fun, too!)

I realize you're in the U.K., but for U.S. amateurs reading this, lest we forget, our charter encourages us to do some building:

97.1 Basis and purpose.
The rules and regulations in this Part are designed to provide an amateur radio service having a fundamental purpose as expressed in the following principles:
(a) Recognition and enhancement of the value of the amateur service to the public as a voluntary noncommercial communication service, particularly with respect to providing emergency communications.
(b) Continuation and extension of the amateur's proven ability to contribute to the advancement of the radio art.
(c) Encouragement and improvement of the amateur service through rules which provide for advancing skills in both the communications and technical phases of the art.
(d) Expansion of the existing reservoir within the amateur radio service of trained operators, technicians, and electronics experts.
(e) Continuation and extension of the amateur's unique ability to enhance international goodwill.

I suggest that you tell the fact like they occured. It's obvious that you have that libnet gang /slant/ to your diatribe. Something must have certainly confused YOU. You seem to be keeping track of my words. Well good, mark this one down. Vic called the net onto an occupied frequency again. It's recorded. I don't know why the LID wants to operate that way but next time we may not be as hospitable. We moved to AVOID the chaos the the libnet gang usually creates on frequency.
Ps. I think it's just about time for a major UPDATE of the 3950 Oinion Page. Some good stuff will be coming out in the near future. Now keep track of those statements too. OK? LOL LOL LOL

I was listening to David Castle, WA9KJI, this evening. He was talking about being at his granddaughter's marching band competition, and how it ran well into the evening. I wondered why I didn't hear the #1 jammer last night.

Then I got the funniest mental picture! I saw David and Lucille, sitting in the football field stands with their family members. Dusk was drawing nigh. David is impatiently waiting for his granddaughter to begin her competition. Finally, in absolute frustration, he arises and yells from the stands...

"WILL YOU GUYS HURRY UP! I'VE GOT TO GET HOME TO JAM THE LIBERTY NET!"

They're fairly common in our radio club parking lot.
Generally they're inefficient on 80 m where my nets they're fine. I don't use HF in the car any more now that I'm not commuting. It's an advertisement in an airport parking lot.

The tap-point on the pole where the feed-line's center conductor is attached can be found by trial and error. The variable capacitor tunes out the inductance of the center conductor's arm.

You can find the specific details of the gamma match in the antenna manual you use for daily reference.

THIS is GREAT! I'm still laughing about this one.. Why? I'm picturing ole' Archie Bunker next door cursing the TV saying "Edith! where's that interference coming from? Jeesh!" as he looks outside up at the neighbors roofs. Hmm.. No new antennas.. Meanwhile, you could have been sitting in at the bench transmitting a KW through a light post! LOL !

Actually, as tall as they are - I could see where they could be an excellent antenna. The only potential problem is the mercury vapor lights can cause RF havoc (noisy) depending on their age and how well they've been installed. Additionally, the wiring to the light would have to be electrically isolated from the metal housing - you certainly wouldn't want the lamp post to be grounded if at all possible.

Great idea though - especially for the apartment / condo / townhouse folks.

Cheers,
Gary

What kind of liability would one would suffer if a child got

Is this likely to be a problem at 25 watts?

EHAM.NET HACKED; NEW AMATEUR RADIO WEB SITE GETS HACKED

The new amateur radio web site, eHam.Net, was recently, causing some problems with various government and educational agencies.

On Friday, September 10, the owners of the web site began receiving phone calls from the U.S. Department of Defense, and were told that their web server was trying to gain access to some of the government's computers.

A statement on the eHam.Net web site said, "A quick look at our server revealed that we had indeed been hacked and that someone was running a process on our machine that was trying to gain information about computers in a lot of different government and university computer systems. We quickly removed the program and attempted to close the loopholes in security that we were aware of. Unforunately, the hackers had installed some kind of back door to our system. On Saturday the hackers deleted all of the files on our system. As of Sunday September 12th we are in the process of restoring the site. We appreciate your patience and understanding."

eHam.Net offers a variety of services to the ham radio community, including current news, chat rooms and forums, links, DX and propogation reports, and much, much more. The site is definately a good resource for all amateurs.

THE FCC LOOKS AT INCREASED ENFORCEMENT OF THE TEN METER BAND

The FCC's Legal Adviser for Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth says hams can expect more rigorous enforcement on 10 meter issues next year. Over the Labor Day weekend, Hollingsworth told visitors to the Shelby Hamfest in North Carolina that the next area of enforcement would be the encroachment of unlicensed individuals into the 10-meter band and a crackdown on illegal RF amplifiers. His announcement drew loud applause from the Shelby crowd. Hollingsworth elaborated on the comments this week in an interview concerning this and other enforcement issues.

"We're coming on to ten months of rejuvenated amateur enforcement now, and two issues are clear -- two areas we need to really crank up on next year," Hollingsworth said. "One is the incursion into 10 meters by unlicensed operators -- CBers and so forth. The other is sales of illegal equipment on the Internet and at hamfests."

At Shelby, Hollingsworth told the crowd that he'd spotted more illegal equipment at Shelby that he'd seen last May at the Dayton Hamvention. At the Hamvention, FCC Field Office personnel from Detroit warned several vendors about potential violations involving RF amplifiers.

The Shelby Hamfest, held at the Cleveland County Fairgrounds, is best known for is flea market, not for its forums, but Hollingsworth still managed to draw a standing-room-only crowd for his Sunday morning presentation. After addressing the overflow forum audience, Shelby Hamfest organizers hastily scheduled a second forum and rearranged the room to gain more seating. Hollingsworth was scheduled to appear at the Virginia State Convention in Virginia Beach September 18-19.

Hollingsworth says his recent enforcement initiative aimed at call sign hoarders has met with some success. "I appreciate the people who have come in on their own and either turned in or trimmed down the number of club call signs that they had," he said this week. During a two-week period in late August, Hollingsworth said 43 call signs voluntarily were turned back to the FCC without any prompting.

Hollingsworth says he's received replies from all of the letters the FCC has sent to multiple call sign holders, including members of the Tucker family in La Mirada, California. On June 30, the FCC requested that family patriarch Roy T. Tucker, N6TK, and other licensees in the Tucker family provide justification in writing for the two dozen or so club call signs held by various family members.

"I have about a half a dozen cases in the hopper," Hollingsworth said of the call sign inquiries initiative, but added that he's deferring judgment on whether the message has gotten across to the amateur community. "I would like to think so," he said, "but I won't know until I've seen these responses." His stack includes replies from the Tucker family, who have hired an attorney to handle the FCC inquiry.

Hollingsworth says he's optimistic that an anticipated FCC internal reorganization that will create a new Enforcement Bureau will occur no later than the end of the year but could be as early as October 1 -- the start of the new federal fiscal year. Hollingsworth has assured that the change will have no effect on Amateur Radio enforcement efforts.

FCC'S UNIVERSAL LICENSING SYSTEM DOES NOT WORK WITH INTERNET EXPLORER

You must use the FCC's online Universal Licensing Systems to apply for an Amateur Radio license or request a change of address. But, unlike commercial web sites, the FCC's system only works with the Netscape Internet browser and does not work with Microsoft's Internet Explorer, requiring amateurs to spend up to 3 hours downloading Netscape before using the ULS.

Mark Schmidt, Director of Information Services for Heritage Broadcasting, wrote an email to the FCC asking about problems using Internet Explorer with the new Universal Licensing System. The FCC replied, via email, on September 15th, confirming that the ULS only works with the Netscape browser. Amateurs will thus be required to download the Netscape browser (which takes up to 3 hours using a modem connection) in order to process amateur license applications and changes.

Currently, in a separate legal proceeding, the government's Department of Justice alleges that Internet Explorer is the dominant browser in use. Mark alleges that the FCC's favoritism towards Netscape could possibly be illegal.

THE WEEKLY DX REPORT

From Annobon Island off the coast of West Africa, which counts as AF-039 for the RSGB Islands on the Air awards, a Spanish DXpedition signing 3C0R [Three Charlie Zero Romeo] is active until the 24th of September. Look for 3C0R on all bands and modes. They'll also be active on 6 metres if conditions allow. QSL via EA5FVY.

From Palestine, Ayar, OZ6ACD, is active as E44/OZ6ACD. QSL via OZ1ACB. QSL cards for contacts with Palestine may be submitted for DXCC credit after the 1st of October.

A major DXpedition from Kanton Island in Central Kiribati [pronounced 'Kirry-bas'] gets underway this week. Six operators including Steve, G4EDG, will be active as T31T and T31K on all bands and modes. YL operator SM6WYN will also be active as T31YL. They will be operating until the 3rd of October. Kanton Island counts as OC-043 for the RSGB IOTA Awards.

A new island for the RSGB IOTA award is due to be activated this week. Look out for the expedition to Imperieuse Reef in the Rowley Shoals off the coast of Western Australia which starts on the 21st of September. Five operators will be active using a special callsign which will be announced once the expedition starts.

From North Caicos in the Turks and Caicos Islands, VP5/HB9CYV and VP5/HB9CYN will be active until 26 September. This counts as NA-002 for the RSGB IOTA award programme.

Seasoned DXpeditioner Andy Chadwick, G4ZVJ, is now in Cambodia, where he is hoping to obtain an XU callsign. If he's successful, he will be active from there until the 25th of September. He then moves on to the Philippines as DU3/G4ZVJ and Thailand as HS0/G4ZVJ, finally closing down on the 6th of October. Look for Andy on CW only, and QSL to his home callsign.

Hi all. I'm earnestly looking to buy a Kenwood SM-220 with the BS-8 Panadapter. It must be in 100% working order, and cosmetically clean, free of damage. Non smokers please only.

In particular, I'm looking for a rig with a stable, well-operating BS-8, with minimal drift from cold start.

I will pay the right price for the right rig; this is a keeper I'm looking for.

Please email to NeilR@innermedia.com, or you can call me at (603) 465-2788

Greetings W6RCA..

Cecil, can you imagine where America would be if every little thing like this resulted in no action because of the possible legal implications? We'd still be in horse and buggy days! Tell me something, why is it that the first thing on the minds of so many Californian's these days is "Sue the Bastards!"? Trust me my friend, the rest of the world doesn't necessarily think like this. Thank God! If I come over at 2 AM to your location and climb your antenna and fall off and break my arm and proceed to sue you aren't you just as liable? Signs, warnings - not a problem - I'll tell the judge I don't read English like so many of the other immigrants coming into California.

Cecil, how many things do you suppose are going on right now around you and me as you read this that you or I probably wouldn't approve of BUT we aren't aware of.. Is THAT going to necessarily stop it from being done? Probably not.. And THAT may be a good thing as I notice NASA preparing to launch yet another shuttle flight. You remember NASA, the folks that proudly took America to the Moon and back - several times.

Cheers,
Gary

Howdy,

You are invited to my non-commercial, sometimes boring, hopefully useful, and always-undergoing-updates website. The URL is http://hfradio.org and features DX information, including QSL Route/Manager Lookups and Callbook Lookups; Propagation Center including the eAlert service (allows you to sign up an email address to the automated email propagation reports); Equidistant Azimuth Map software (allows you to create maps of any QTH); Swap and Shop; Bookstore (I've hand-picked over a thousand book titles on radio, etc.); Free website space for YOU to create your own Ham or SWL site, and there's more. Easy to navigate. Open for suggestions.

If you feel up to it, after looking around the site, drop me a note (you'll find my address on the site) and share your thoughts.

Well, that's a little different than turning a piece of public property into one's private antenna system. It is unbelievable to me that you see nothing wrong with energizing a publically owned lamppost with a dangerous level of RF with no warning of any kind to the unsuspecting public. I would be mucho pi$$ed if I leaned against a public lamppost and got an RF burn from some ham too cheap to put up an antenna.

Greetings Cecil..

We're talking about less than 25 watts to the lamp post with feed line losses taken into account. Further, at approx. 25 watts of HF RF you won't get 'burned' leaning against a vertical antenna. I can't begin to tell you all the times I've had an amateur operator friend in the shack while I manually tuned a Butternut HF6V. Any burns - no! And he was putting at least 25 watts into the coax. Keep in mind that many folks out there in the real world don't have the luxury of putting up a monster array or even a vertical depending on their location. They do what Clint Eastwood mentioned in one of his movies - improvise. And this was an excellent idea. And I'm sure there are more than a few amateur operators out there right now doing something very similar to this. And the passerby probably doesn't know it nor really even cares.

Cheers,
Gary

Even residing in Madisonville, TX your call certainly originated (at one time) in California. So what I've referred to regarding California - you certainly understand. Including that mentality which certainly doesn't correlate with southern hospitality!

Hello,

WB8RCR has recently posted a new version of his program, 'QSL Maker' - check it out at http://hfradio.org/wb8rcr/

This is a Windows 95 program, It will not work under Win 3.1. The program has also been used on Windows 98 and Windows NT Workstation 4.0.

- When you first bring up the program, you are shown a dummy QSL design.

- Simply enter your call and address and you have a useable, if somewhat dull, QSL.

- Your call, name and address are remembered for future launches.

- You can adjust the position, color, and font for all the elements of the card.

- You can use a Windows bitmap as a background for your card.

- Once you have the design you like, you can save it for future use. In fact, you can save any number of designs for special purposes, events, etc.

- There are 2, free-form lines for your QRP-L #, FISTS #, 10-10 #, grid square, awards, etc.

- The info block can be removed for those who would like to write this information on the back.

- Dockable toolbars, put them where you want.

- There is a full-blown installation program, and complete deinstall.

- There is extensive help.

- If you use custom colors, they are remembered across launches.

Again, this is software by WB8RCR. Come check it out.

I beg to differ. 35v RF is enough to get a nasty burn. Try touching your tongue to it. (Remember "The Christmas Story" where the kid touches his tongue to a lamp post?) I've still got a scar on my lip from touching it to my metal microphone while driving a dipole with only 50w when in high school.

Was that with someone touching the antenna with one hand and ground with the other? I seriously doubt it.

Nowadays, a ham who has never set foot in California can get a W6xxx call.

Cecil, I said "As a young pup..." I was a kid when I did that.

Use your imagination: Substitute "flag pole" or "grounded antenna tower" for "streetlight pole"; the matching scheme is the same.

What is the transmitting frequency on a CW rig when the signal is generated by sending a tone with SSB techniques? Since the carrier is suppressed it is not broadcast. So, is the transmitted signal (which is equal to the carrier plus or minus the sideband tone) considered the broadcast frequency or is the suppressed carrier still considered the frequency? Help please.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT:

K1DWU

K1DWU's collection of Amateur Radio related links has grown to over 4,500.

Selden, NY - September 20, 1999 - The K1DWU collection of Ham Radio links (http://www.ham-links.org/ has grown to over 4,500. This collection is unique from many other collections in three ways: 1) Each links is verified every week, 2) Each links is only listed once, 3) The collection is distributed to over 350 other hams on a weekly basis.

The original list was started in 1997, and was a collection of 10 different lists from around the net. After validating and re-classifying the list began at just over 1,000. The original list was kept as a text file, it is now kept in a MySQL database.

One of the original objectives was to share the list with other hams around the world. The distribution of the list is now 350+. It is available to people in 3 formats, Single Page Compressed, Three Page Compressed and Single Page uncompressed.

The software to validate the list has evolved over time and is currently a custom written application that validates a portion of the list every day. As soon as we are not able to reach a site, it is removed from the list. We continue to try the site for 26 days, if we're still not able to reach the site, it is put on our permanent block list. In the past 6 weeks over 500 sites have fallen into this category.

We are committed to offer the highest quality collection of amateur radio related links at any site.

Why would you need such a program? Any graphics program (heck, even many word processing programs) would have enough desktop publishing capabilities to handle a simple QSL card.

Of course, I use a Macintosh. Perhaps such simple things are more difficult on a PC. (flame suit on)

Been out of town. What has been going on here? Is "SLOPE HEAD WISEMAN" still hiding out in his West Virginia shack peeping from behind the blinds each week end and dressing in "DRAG" to avoid detection? I just know he loves putting those long stockings on with the Playtex girdle and the "CROSS YOUR HEART BRA"!!. That God awful shade of red lipstick he loves, and the "FAT SHOP" dress does nothing for him. But I guess that is his "LIFE STYLE".
I just know Herbie is still here and Porkbutt is gone. I understand from what I have heard that "JAIL DALE" down in Fla, is having to visit his son who is back in jail . It looks to me that things have not changed. Fill me in.

Hi Dave,
I'm amateur since 1980. I've already worked with a classic Hy-Gain 14-AVQ with outstanding results, especially in DXing. This is probably one of the more effective vertical in the market, even its design is just a bit "dated" (1975..?). It handles well the 2KW PEP of my TL922 and its constructions is very robust.
But there are three "secrets" to achieve such outstanding performances:

- ONE: the antenna must be mounted well above the ground (at least 10 meters, mine is 15 meters up), up on the roof or over a long pole.

- TWO: at least one (two is better) wire radial for each band must be provided: the radials must be at least 5 meters above the roof level in order to work with minimum losses. The radial's inclination angle with respect to the antenna axis must be high (greater than 45 degrees): this insures a very low take-off angle.

- THREE: the radials must carefully tuned (i.e. adjusted in length) for a good resonance in the mid-band.

In order to give you an idea of how this antenna works, I've performed some comparison test with a good friend of mine who has a 4-elements quad @ 18 meters over ground: in a real DX envinronment my vertical looses only 1 and 1/2 S-units !!!

If you are active on 20 meters, you can ear me during the week-end on 14.185...

The above is certainly a fabrication or you weren't able to hear very well. I

It's the same frequency as when you're using SSB; it's called the "Window Frequency" (as in what your dial/readout is indicating).
In other words, it's the frequency that the carrier would be on if the carrier wasn't suppressed.

When using voice, you're transmitting a varying tone (your voice), yet the frequency is the window frequency; no different when you're transmitting a constant tone -- the frequency is the window frequency.

I believe you're making up the "bitching." I don't know of anyone past or present who sends exclamation marks in Morse. And how do you decipher lower-case Morse from upper-case Morse? What the Morse for <shift>?

Jeff, you're showing your ignorance. The traffic posted by Mr. Luder is excerpted directly from a DXCluster screen, exclamation

Hi

I've just acquired a Sommerkamp TS-800DX CB.
At least I assume it was originally a CB as it covers the EU channels on FM.
It also works on receive on the 10m band. 28 to 29megs on AM, and 29 to 29.7megs on FM.
Has anybody got any information on this radio, instruction book, diagrams, mod info? I'm certain this set is capable of loads more than its letting on, and might be a very handy little mobile for 10m FM.

cheers

QSL Maker does not make QSL cards. It extracts data from logging programs -- date, time, and freq of contact; call of station contacted; etc -- and prints that data onto labels, which you then stick onto QSL cards.

That is not correct, it does in fact make QSL cards, but it does have the ability to print QSL info directly onto the cards rather than just onto labels.

And to the gent who said that any graphics program can accomplish the same thing, while this is true, QSL Maker is by far eaiser to use, and has more flexability that just using a word processor or graphics program.

Take a look for yourself, it's even free.

Hey fellow DJs and audioheads...

I can't believe I found what I have been looking for so long!!!! ....

A decent DJ program that does everything you really need and with style.

I'm sick of DJ programs that promise the earth but are too impractical to even consider. Well, now I've found one that truly does what it claims.....

OtsJuke DJ fully handles volume with a built-in AGC, compressor and limiter!

Plus it actually does decent mixes using auto-detected points. It's got this program which you run on ya MP3s and it calculates it all for ya while ya sip a coffee. Buggered if I could be stuffed putting them all in myself anyway.

And there's no 2 second latency issues. Volume, pitch and a tempo shifter all respond instanty. And tis got a 20 band GraphicsEQ in it too, and unlike most it responds instantly!!!!

if anyone figures out how it works out the beat in the song let me know. I thought that was impossible.

I think the best thing is the clear interface it so simple - it's just too easy. with all this extra time saved I guess i'll have a chance to become a bit more creative in my work.

It says on the web page it only got release on the 9/9/99. Must of been a product of all those supposed malfunctions, actually going well! All the good karma made this cool DJ/radio program.

Anyway if ya interested go to http://www.otsjuke.com

The demos pretty quick to download.

A N N O U N C I N G

The Worlds Most Advanced Solar Activity and Space Weather
Early Warning System

SWARM - Solar Warning and Realtime Monitor

Version 2.0

We are proud to announce the long awaited release of Version 2.0 of our Solar Warning and Real-time Monitoring (SWARM) software, just in time for the maximum phase of the solar cycle!

The following are just a few of the possible applications:

- Receive notification of when to look outside for auroral activity (also known as the northern lights, the Aurora Borealis, or the Aurora Australis). SWARM doesn't miss an event.

- Determine periods when errors may increase in navigational equipment such as with Global Positioning System (GPS) equipment.

- Educational supplement (high-school or University) for providing hands-on experience for curriculum dealing with Astronomy, our Sun, or the Earth's space environment.

- Professional-grade data for space physics, solar physics and geophysical research.

- Monitor and predict solar activity and its effects on the Earth.

- Monitor space environment conditions to help protect satellites.

- Monitor geomagnetic activity to help protect electrical power grids from geomagnetically induced currents during storm periods.

- Monitor ionospheric conditions to help determine the performance of high frequency radio propagation conditions.

Version 2.0 has some major new enhancements over older versions. A few of the more important enhancements include:

- The ability to produce fully-contoured maps of the Sun's photospheric magnetic fields and the modelled heliospheric current sheet at 3.25 solar radii.

- Intelligently dial out to your Internet Service Provider (ISP)

AND hang up when done, if you connect by phone to the Internet.

- Communicate with other copies of SWARM running on local area networks (LANs) or Wide Area Networks (WANs). Extremely efficient intranetworking can result in signifcantly improved performance.

- SWARM now supports 28 magnetic observatories providing near-realtime (HOURLY) geomagnetic activity information.

- Five new alerts and warnings bringing the total number of settable alerts and warnings supported by SWARM to 68! The new warnings include Middle and Low Latitude Auroral Activity Watches and Warnings that are based on near real-time solar wind conditions. You won't miss a single aurora display with these new warnings active!

- A solid Internet Data Aquisition System provides SWARM with much improved reliability and stability in obtaining data over the Internet. Although the improvements are most notable on Windows and 98 systems will also benefit from the changes through increased reliability for long-term unattended operation.
NT 4.0 systems, which now run exceptionally stable, Windows 95

- Secure operation for users located behind firewalls.

- Restoration of all data that may have been lost to older versions of SWARM due to unannounced changes by the Space Environment Center in some of their data formats.

- Interactive mouse support on most graphical plots.

- Software shipped on CD includes our Master SWARM Database, a complete, very detailed and contiguous database of SWARM data from 1996 to the present (over 470 megabytes of data). Installation of this database from the CD to your hard-disk is optional.

- Comes with a detailed electronic Users Guide in Adobe Acrobat Reader format as well as a revamped internal help system, so you can view, search and print out the information you need quickly.

- Compatibility with Windows 95, Windows 98, Windows NT 4.0 as well as the new Windows 2000 operating system.

- Year 2000 Compliance.

For complete details and pricing information, please refer to the SWARM web-page at: http://solar.uleth.ca/swarm. Pricing and upgrade information and forms are available there.

If you purchased a copy of SWARM after April 1999, please contact COler@Solar.Stanford.Edu for pricing information. Otherwise, refer to the pricing table at: http://solar.uleth.ca/swarm Wow! Are you dense, or what?

None of that was sent on CW.

It was screen-copied off a DXCluster verbatim, not off 20 meters! Damn, Jeffrey, you are as bad as old "Cutie Boy Masataka" when it comes to comprehension of simple concepts, like for instance the DXCluster was likely on 2 meters, reporting activity of 3C0R on 14025.0, 14025.2, 14024.2, and 14000.0 (which is the default freq reported by the cluster when an op inputs 20M CW).

73, Carpe Diem

P.S. The Morse equivalent of "!" is dadadadit. I'd have thought you knew that, being such a CW guru as you fancy yourself to be. I bet even Masa Cutie Boy knew that, and he's a blooming codeless-JA!

Well, this is an amateur radio newsgroup, not rec.radio.uscg.misc newgroup. Whether they can send exclamation points on maritime bands is of no concern to radioamateurs.

I have a Motorola Radius 120 problem. When I transmit on the radio with the van running it wont transmit, but when I turn the van off it works fine!!... The radio is wired straight to the battery. It works fine in other vehicals, etc... the only thing I could think of it could be is a over charge from the alternator to the battery and the radio might have a limiter, or the rectifier might be funny in it.

Thanks a lot for any help.

How many times do I have to read messages from hams that send a "Thank You" addressed to ALL. When one seeks help and someone takes the time to respond, the least the receiver of help can do is send a simple individual reply for thanks. After all-the respondents to this call for help responded one by one.
I have received up to 75 messages in a call for help and sent individual thanks to each. It was very time consuming, but it was the right thing to do.

Would you at your wedding, if you were the groom, get up at the end of the reception and yell out, "Gee, Thanks everyone for the gifts?"
If you are a T Y P I C A L ham--absolutely.

It is unlikely you will respond to this if you did not even bother to respond to someone who H E L P E D you.

I am the way I am because as a teen I was an active ham radio operator.
I used "the mike" to not face real people thus missing my teen years the way real people experience it. It is not ham radio's fault of course, the fault is entirely mine. However I am not that person now and I despise in others what I despised in myself. I am much like a reformed smoker (they tend to be fanatics against smoking). When I hear hams on the air blabbing on about nothing, doing nothing, being nothing, kissing each others butts so much their lips turn brown I want to anything other than be like them. Further I was a gutless wimp up to 18 years of age (fit in well with ham radio), I would cower with the slightest threat but I learned that fear is far worse than being beat up and rarely would have anyone beat me anyway. So today if you want to threaten me the odds are high (especially if you are a ham) that nothing will ever be carried out. And if threatened I always tell the person to carry out the threat even if my acts that caused the threat were wrong because once you threaten me that closes the door as to the legitimacy of your cause.

Mr. Fisher is nothing at all like a reformed smoker. I have been smoke free for almost seven years now, thank you. As such, I prefer a smoke free environment, and often go to great lengths of avoid other peoples smoke.

Mr. Fisher, on the other hand, seeks out that smokey room full of cigarette, cigar, and pipe smoke. He is very active in ham radio, both on the air and on Internet newsgroups.

Mr. Fisher has stated that he has the need to feel that he is better than SOMEBODY. So he picked a group of people that is about 0.02% of the U.S. population.

BTW, Mr. Fisher also belongs to a NG that discussed weather in New England. He conducts himself there just like he does here, and he is liked and respected as much there as he is here.

Ask him about the scholarship his daughter, who is also a ham, got from the ARRL.

So if Burt had his daughter's intelligence, he would have been out of ham radio by 1961. If he had HALF the intelligence of his daughter, he would have been out of ham radio by 1963. If he had 1/4 the intelligence of his daughter, he would have been out of ham radio by 1967. If he had 1/8 the intelligence of his daughter, he would have been out by 1975. If he had 1/16 her intelligence, he would have been out by 1991.

So Burt has far less than 1/16th intelligence than a 10 year old girl. But then, we already knew that.

Wow Burt Fisher, I didn't realize all of that was within you. Magnificent description of one motivation for becoming a ham radio operator. Seeing you come across articulately renders your promotion understandable--and acrtually clever.

Being a 60 year old ham of nearly 50 years, I'd like to add my opinion on the subject-matter. Though we both may have displaced reality behind the microphone, we shouldn't color our commentary to our own past disorders nor confine our promotion to our own proclivities. Ham radio is a pluralistic hobby with wide appeal--still! And deference should be paid to all stripes.

This will likely go over with as loud a thud as the Letterman non-appearance.

"Amateur Radio may play a role in NBC's new show Third Watch, set to premiere Thursday, September 23, at 10 PM Eastern. (The show's regular time slot will be on Sundays at 8 PM"

"Further attempts to find out more about ham radio, now that the show is set to debut, have been unsuccessful."

Once they found out about ARRL, contesters and the potential cost of props, they likely decided to make the character a hacker. Unless they were looking for an overweight, middle-aged, balding character with obsessive traits.

That's wrong. Maybe you're saying that some rigs have a readout error which cause them to display that particular frequency, but that frequency is certainly NOT the transmitting frequency.

Ham radio clearly has a narrow appeal. When I became licensed in 1959 the average ham was 27, not it is 54. It was common then for high schools to have ham clubs, rare today. It is a hobby for old white fat men.

I could not resist. It seems everytime the Macintosh is mentioned in these newsgroups, an argument soon develops. I fugured I would get the first shot in this time.

However, having said that, I was rather surprised to see no heated response in the messages so far. Perhaps ham operators are more civilized than some of the people in the other newsgroups.

It was a silly comment. I'm glad others recognized it as such.

Depends on where you are grabbing the antenna.

A gamma match can have much more than the feedline voltage on it, because it has reactance and resistance. The VAR power is always higher than the applied power, sometimes by a large amount.

I wouldn't worry much about grabbing a 1/4 wl tall or shorter series fed vertical at the bottom or near the bottom with 25 watts, but you can ask for problems if the gamma section just beyond the capacitor(s) is exposed to people.

IMO, using when using public property for an antenna I'd be SURE absolutley nothing could go wrong...and then still think twice about it.

If it's your pole on your property, that's another story.

Insightful Burt. But don't we have the greying of so many things. Not too long ago folks expected to live to their 30s; my Mom just died one day shy of 98.

Yep, she was old but hardly fat. Even if she were fat, that wouldn't have prejudiced me since folks weight is irrelevant to me. Had ham radio enriched her life in her senior years, that would only have been more reason to applaud it.

No hobby or service, if you will, can maintain a historic lock on technology. In fact, our system is based otherwise: On the notion of breaking up monopolies. More power to ham radio and the computer revolution and Burt Fisher.

Good point Enforcer. You are saying speak out at your own risk in today's litigious society.

Personally, standing up respectfully for our rights has become a pet issue. Because so many of us are scared of the ramifications of even good, noble behavior, something is wrong in the system.

I think we should respectfully blame the lawyers. The public has been kept in such darkness surrounding the amazing breadth of rights we possess that we are ready to run to a lawyer for permission in so many routine things. So it has become a government of lawyers, by lawyers, and for lawyers.

I have taken my pet peeve further. Although I've never finished law school and do not feign the knowledge of a bar certified lawyer, I can hold my own in the basic concepts affecting my life, such as defamation. When you feel such confidence to speak your mind, you don't feel anger, malice or intimidation, which makes your contribution to others greater. And more than once, I've successfully defended myself to make my point.

7414. What can we do about licensed hams who openly sell illegal amplifiers to CBers?

Ran across this posting on rec.radio.cb recently and was more than a little disturbed about it:

In article <37E821CE.B5778D79@netzero.net>, Bill Eitner <kd6tas@netzero.net> writes:

> I sell 500Rs for $375-- >they're worth every dime. You send me $375 plus $30 for insured >shipping both ways, and I'll send you one on a 30 day trial basis.

Unless this is a false name and/or callsign being used, a quick check of QRZ reveals the author to be a licensed amateur operator:

KD6TAS Class: Technician Codes: HA USA
Name: WILLIAM A. EITNER
Addr1: 780 18TH AVE
Addr2: MENLO PARK, CA 94025
Country: USA
Issued: 02 Mar 1993 Expires: 02 Mar 2003

This is a BLATANT disregard of both federal communications law and the code of ethics to which amateurs (should) adhere. Not only is this guy marketing amplifiers to CBers, he's apparently making a business-for-profit out of doing so. Plus, he openly identifies himself and displays his amateur callsign!

Mr. Hollingsworth, I hope you're listening. This one should be like shooting fish in a barrel.

Furthermore, I'd be tempted to transmit and see if the other end

Anyway, I would like to do some 6 eventually too - I have an all-mode has any experience with this, I'd love to hear about it. My 2M rig is a Yaesu FT 290R MK II. I'd like to hear from anyone who has put a transverter on one of these radio's too.

Is there any activity on 6M AM? I would think that most (all?) long dangerous) that there is no AM activity.

Press Release --ARRL Task Force Seeks Proposals for Future Technology

NEWINGTON, Conn., September 1, 1999 -- The American Radio Relay League's Technology Task Force (TTF) wants to hear from hams with ideas and proposals for new technology to carry Amateur Radio into the next century. The TTF was created in January, 1999 by the ARRL Board of Directors. It was given a broad mandate to evaluate technologies applicable to the future of Amateur Radio, the help guide the Amateur Radio Service and the ARRL into the 21st century.

You Can Help! Your ideas and work could be the key that opens new doors for ham radio! The TTF invites the submission of ideas and proposals from all parts of the amateur community, so that it may draw from the best of the best ideas in Amateur Radio.

What are the burning technical issues facing Amateur Radio today? What technologies exist that can be utilized to improve Amateur Radio and address these issues? What should the League do to encourage the development and growth of these technologies? What obstacles need to be overcome? Do you know of someone working on a technical project that needs support, developing something new or bringing technology used in other fields into Amateur Radio? Do you know someone who is improving on an established technology or who has found a new use for something that is "old hat?"

The TTF is asking you to tell us about all of this, and more. Completed projects, work in progress or simply a good idea can all be helpful. The TTF invites the submission of information and concepts on a wide range of technologies with the potential to improve Amateur Radio and to promote what the FCC calls "continuation and extension of the amateur's proven ability to contribute to the advancement of the radio art."

The TTF is formulating ARRL policy recommendations on a wide range of technical issues. This is your opportunity to directly influence what the ARRL will do to promote the technology important to the future of Amateur Radio. The TTF has made it easy for you to share your ideas. You can fill in a form on the ARRL Web page at http://www.arrl.org/news/ttf/, send email to the TTF at ttfinput@arrl.org or offer your ideas by mail to the ARRL Technology Task Force, c/o Ed Hare, W1RFI, 225 Main St., Newington, CT 06111.

Improper use of English speaks volumes about one's intelligence. You made no mention of anybody else in the house, or whether they had a ham license or not. Therefore, one would think that you were the only one using a microphone. Singular pronoun "I", plural pronoun "we"...dumbass. Didn't you have English while you were taking those "anthro" courses at the community college?

I didn't imply that it bothered me, jackass. However, porno featuring 12-16 year olds is sick. If you like child pornography, that is your business, Grunt. I wouldn't admit it in such a public forum if I was you, since the FBI does look for kiddie pornphiles such as yourself.

Well, you sure do like putting your foot in your mouth Roger. Why do I have to go into an explanation about how many people there are in a house? When I use the pronoun "we" it automatically indicates more than one person. That's what makes a language useful. One doesn't have to write a paragraph to get the point across.

Also, you assume way too much when you think that just because someone uses a code key, they are a ham. For all you know, that person could be a boy scout trying to get his code badge.

My statement was a simple fact, "we don't own a mic", and, once again, you have made a feeble attempt at attacking me. Like I said earlier, if you're going to sling shit, please give us a challenge.

I've been thinking about this, and here's what I think:

Consider someone who has won an award, such as an Academy Award, and gives an acceptance speech. They thank many people publicly. So the way I see it, if someone asks for help publicly, a public thank you is proper. However, a gift, such as a wedding gift, is personal and private, so a personal and private acknowledgment would be proper in that case.

You see, it's not really a question of whether you personally consider the practice right or not, but whether the practice has become acceptable en mass. Of course, you can always write to Judith Martin (a.k.a. "Miss Manners") and find out for sure, if you're in disagreement with me.

7451. Ham Radio Experiences (NOT GOOD)

Hello all,

Just wanted to share a little story regarding my experiences with ham radio. Help me make a fair assessment:

I have been a ham for about a year now. I remember I couldn't wait to get my callsign after passing the exam, and the pride I felt with that ticket came in the mail and I could get on the air. From there, though, it went downhill quick.

So I get on the air. Aside from one nice gentleman who chatted with me several times on a local repeater, I can't get anyone to respond. "<callsign> monitoring" I call, over and over. Mabye i'm not getting out, I thought, but a quick grab of my HT to listen to the output of the repeater(s) I key up ensures I'm loud and clear. Nobody answers, until I call again and again and finally someone gets tired of hearing me call and decides they'll speak with a stranger. Seems that if you're not a "regular" here whom everyone knows, nobody's interesting in responding.

So I figured if I got to know some of the other hams, someone may want to talk to me. I get on the internet and find the website of the local club. It advertises a meeting that night! Great, I thought, and headed strait to the location right after work. But nobody's at the location. Must have moved, I think, so I get on the air and call. And call. And call some more on the most heavily used repeater in the metro area (1 million+ population). A quick grab of my HT again confirms I'm FQ into the repeater. Another 30 min. of calling and a rather irritated gentleman advises that the meeting's been moved, and that he's there, but advises it's a party for the club, and reservations needed to be made in advance. Discouraged, I head home...

Then I thought maybe I should get involved in a local ham radio function. This was a good idea, as a leader of the local club was on the air asking for volunteers to work with them at a Christmas parade-type function in town in a couple weeks. I cheerfully volunteered, and the man took my name and number over the air. Said he'd call soon with details when the volunteer roster was complete, but no call ever came, either on the air or by phone. So I assumed they didn't need any more help. I attended the parade with my wife and approached one of the hams working there and attempted friendly conversation. I was told rather stand-offishly that I could have helped, all I'd have to do is get a ham license. The guy just assumed that because i didn't have wires and antennas hanging off my body, and wasn't either elderly or handicapped, I must not be a ham.

With my faith in ham radio in question, I didn't get on the air for several months. Then I began traveling. Thought it would be nice to meet other hams on the road, so at high points I would call CQ on 146.52 simplex. And called and called and called. After about a month of doing this daily while driving, I made a contact! The gentleman was very friendly and interesting, but told me about calling on simplex 146.52, "nobody ever monitors that anymore". Figured I'd have better luck with the CB, and sure enough I did.

Later that month I broke down on the side of the road outside San Antonio TX. I happened to know that SA has wide-area coverage on 146.94, so keyed up the machine (again FQ) and called CQ, then called "emergency" then "mayday". No answer. Held down 0 DTMF key for 5 sec and called again, still no answer. So I check other repeaters. Only other one I could reach was being occupied by someone who just loved to bring up the autopatch unidentified, dial numbers at random, then bring it down, over and over. Listened a little longer and found it was a kid playing with the autopatch. So I call 146.52, since I'm on an interstate (must be hams on the road, it's a holiday weekend). Called till blue in the face. No response there either. Gave up. The CB brought a tow in about 5 min.

So I guess my point is that I don't want to hear any more of the "long-timers" whining about ham radio being a "dying breed", and that nobody in the 20-40's is interested any more. I'm a very technically competent, friendly, and personable individual, and I felt as though I had something to contribute by being involved in ham radio. There was someone that WAS interested (me), and tried earnestly to get involved and participate, but frankly, I find more responsive, friendly, and helpful people on CB.

Does the politician ask each individual for their vote or do they address voters as a group? And when the election is won, does this same politician send individuals Thank You's to his constituents?.....

The answer is no.

Dear hams,
A severe earthquake took place in Taiwan on Sep 21, more than 1,700 died and 9000 wounded. Chinese hams had setup an emergency network on 7.060Mhz. To make the traffic more efficiently, please keep the frequency clean for emergency communication, and help to listen on this frequency for any BV signal. If necessary, help to forward

If you set the transmitter in USB, the signal which appears on the air is equal to the sum of the frequency of the suppressed carrier and the frequency of the tone inserted. If you set the transmitter in LSB, the signal which appears on the air is the difference between the two.

For example, if your radio is on a frequency of 14,020KHz USB, and you modulate it with a 1KHz tone, the transmitted signal will appear on the air at 14,021KHz. If your radio is on a frequency of 14,020KHz LSB, and you modulate it with a 1KHz tone, the transmitted signal will appear on the air at 14,019KHz.

All the above presumes that your radio is actually in SSB mode, and you are sending the "CW" by keying an external tone.

On the other hand, if you have your radio in the "CW" mode, and this pseudo-CW is being internally generated, then most modern rigs will "offset" the displayed frequency to compensate, and will display the actual on-the-air frequency, not the suppressed carrier frequency.

No, that's incorrect. If you're sending CW by keying audio into a SSB rig, the frequency will be the "window frequency" plus the audio frequency. Many old rigs, even when in CW mode, had this problem. On my Heath SB104A, the transmitted frequency on CW is actually the window frequency plus about 700Hz.

I have a very nice Kenwood TM-741A Tribander 4 SALE.
It has 3 modules 144/220/440 MHZ. Condition is very good, and works great with the Microphone, Mounting Bracket, Power Cable, Original Instruction Manual. No scratches front panel looks fanastic. It comes with a $80.00 Comet CFX-324 Triplexer for only $650.00 plus shipping.

Likely an authentic message and request.

Yet it bothers me that a mainland Chinese station originated this. We all know ham radio is closely watched there. It would appear that the government is showing the "renegade province" benevolence to coax them back into the fold.

Is it not the power to assign the TIN or SSN granted by Congress o the SSA ? Then why is FCC processing financial information, even for those who owe it no fees ? Why has FCC decided (contrary to Phil Kane's claim early on) that individuals may not use a TIN and must give their SSN ? What is the real goal here ?

ARRL MO:

"For now, club station applicants must obtain an Assigned Taxpayer Identification Number (ATIN) by contacting the FCC Call Center. Call toll-free 888-CALL FCC (225-5322) and press menu item 2 (those calling from outside the US should dial +1-202-418-0190). Club station applicants should continue using the old paper Form 610B and write the ATIN in the upper righthand corner of the form.
Hams who are trustees for more than one club station must obtain a separate ATIN for each club."

My word, I do enjoy SWLing more these days, are there are none of those "great CW ops' jamming each other in pursuit of 3C0R. I don't have to tune across the broadcast bands and hear overpowered ham stations swearing at each other, under the guise of FCC "enforcement".

Of course, the amateur radio community should be concerned about the portrayal of the amateur radio operator on the show. Is he/she a good guy

The only way to enjoy ham radio, even remotely, begins with a linear of some sort or a beam. What ARRL does not realize is that today, most new hams aren't going to give it enough time to figure this out. More likely because it has been top heavy with contesters since Vic was president, they are too stupid to see it and wouldn't care if they did.

You can go back to SWLing, listening to your police who don't argue over DX or use the web.

Once you get set up, you need to learn that hams are boring; many who aren't ancient are quite odd. Have you been to a flea market ? You may leave wondering what the hell you've done if you've spent any money whatsoever.

Even if you start off and get past this, you then need to contend with the deranged losers who think jamming is a form of fun. Sure it's funny for a few minutes to hear idiots panic and start tossing out the "we're gonna get ya" comments and say "Riley, are you listening" when they're on a repeater in Nevada, but it gets boring unless you need some Prozac really badly.

Ken-

Now is the best time to get on Six Meters. If you wait a couple of years, the sunspot cycle will be decreasing.

There are reports that there is still activity on AM. When the band is open, put out a call on 50.400, and see if anyone is listening. If you just monitor, everyone else may be just monitoring as well.

Let's set the illegal operators debates aside and start a new thread. This one is dedicated to all the stupid, foolish, misleading, and downright incorrect statements sellers make during online auctions. All meant in good humor, of course!

The first entry comes from Yahoo! Auctions site: http://auctions.yahoo.com/auction/8946230. This gentleman is selling a 2-meter mobile rig. In the description, he offers the following notice:

"When you bid on the rig, please e-mail me w/ your callsign so that I can verify you are a ham. It is illegal to sell a ham radio to someone who is not licensed. "

Nope. Guess again. Better go back to your Gordon West books.

Note: this address does not accept unsolicited e-mail. Please contain all discussion regarding USENET posts to the appropriate newsgroup thread.

I got here from keyword "contest." I wanted to tell people about a deal that has over $650,00 worth of "prizes." It's not really a contest because you get merchandise for your money. But you also get a chance to win a bunch of stuff--a furnished home, a 1932 Ford hot rod, snowmobiles, motorcyle etc. http://www.AICgifts.com. I hope it's okay to post this here.

The numbers are ZN414, ZN416 or MK484. These are 3 terminal chips that run on 1.8 volts @ low current and are usable from 30 khz through 1.8 Mhz.

I have no other information.

Are you OT 's out there listening?

Interesting question... Are we the problem, or is the newcomers fault?

Did anyone take the time to ease the new guy into the hobby, or did we all ignore him simply because he WAS new and not a member of "the group"?

Did he make a mistake by making his debut to amateur radio on 2 Meters?
Should he try other bands/modes or simply cut his losses and leave?

I can't answer for anyone else. I always make an attempt to welcome newbies to the hobby, but I gotta tell you, current 2 meter operation makes it a little difficult, for all the reasons Jimmy mentioned.

Jimmy, personally I think that you should keep trying, but maybe on another band. I prefer 10 meters myself, but everyone has a favorite.

Thanks for letting us know how you feel.

m = Y sub 2 - Y sub1/X sub2 - X sub1 if X sub 1 does not equal X sub 2

Of course not, you're lucky to calculate the sum of 2+2.

Jimmy

I don't blame you for not loving ham radio after all that.. I too had some less than desirable experiences here in the Boston area... but quickly found some repeater and simplex freqs. to have fun with.
As for CB.....I left that band because one morning, 6:30 am. my vehicle broke down on the expressway; lots of people answered my call indeed.. but none would help me, most were arrogant.. finally after about a half hour of very nasty comments and insults...one gentleman made a phone call for me.
After that incident, I got my ticket. Don't give up on ham radio..
If you are ever in the Boston area check out the 146.64 2m repeater, or 145.545 simplex

That's nuts. Why is such power output needed? I have worked stations "loud and clear" in Europe, the Pacific an attic dipole antenna.

I guess I haven't figured out whatever it is you think needs to be figured out. Other than the "blow away need for the high power and beam antenna?

CERTIFIED MAIL RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED

Mr. Sidney W. Mahan

P. O. Box 437

Estancia, NM 87016

RE: Notice of Intent to Designate Station License K5BLB for Revocation Hearing, and to Designate General Class Operator license for Suspension for the Remainder of License Term

Dear Mr. Mahan:

On November 18, 1998, we issued a Warning letter to you concerning your operation on 3.950 MHz. The letter concerned tapes that were played on your Amateur station, as well as sound effects and deliberate interference to other operators.

We continue to receive complaints and monitoring information on the operation of your station, particularly regarding profanity, obscenity, broadcasting extreme racial slurs, deliberate interference and failure to properly identify. These complaints particularly concern your interference to a net that attempts to operate around 3.950 MHz on Saturday evenings.

Also from our monitoring, it is apparent that you are not only seriously misinformed about the basis and purpose of the allocation of spectrum for Amateur Radio, but seriously misinformed about the Commission's enforcement of the prohibition against obscene or indecent Amateur radio transmissions as well. The Commission's rules prohibit Amateur stations from transmitting obscene or indecent words or language. You are advised that, for indecency purposes, the Commission treats Amateur transmissions the same as commercial broadcasts.

Utterances of "any obscene, indecent or profane language by means of radio communications" are prohibited by Title 18, U.S.C. Section 1464. Under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, the Commission may revoke any station license for violation of Section 1464 of Title 18. See 47 U.S.C. Section 312(a)(6).

Obscene speech is not protected by the First Amendment and cannot be broadcast at any time. To be obscene, material must meet a three prong test: (1) an average person, applying contemporary community standards, must find that the material, as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest; (2) the material must depict or describe, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by applicable law; and (3) the material, taken as a whole, must lack serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value. See Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15 (1973).

The Commission defines indecency as language or material that, in context, depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards, sexual or excretory activities or organs. The Supreme Court has repeatedly rejected arguments that this definition is unconstitutionally vague. See Action for Children's Television v. F.C.C., 58 F.3d. 654 (D.C. Cir. 1995), FCC v. Pacifica Foundation, 438 U.S. 726 (1977).

This serves as notice that, if these complaints continue, we intend to designate your Amateur Station license K5BLB for a revocation hearing before an Administrative Law Judge, and further that we intend to designate your General Class operator license for suspension for the remainder of the license term, April 12, 2006.

Designation of your Amateur station license for revocation, and your Operator license for suspension for the remainder of the term, means that you would have the right to appear at a hearing on the record before an Administrative Law Judge. The hearing would be held pursuant to the Federal Rules of Evidence and you would be allowed to submit evidence in response to the Bureau's case. Specific issues relating to your qualifications to be a Commission licensee would be detailed. The Bureau's case would consist of sworn testimony by witnesses and of documentary evidence, including monitoring evidence, both in its direct case and in any rebuttal presentation. You would be subject to cross-examination on any testimony or other evidence you submit.

At the conclusion of the hearing, proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law would be required to be filed by both parties, after which the Administrative Law Judge would render a written Initial Decision to the full Commission.

Under separate cover within two weeks, we will forward tape recordings made of your station on August 13, 1999 on 3.950 MHz. You will be requested to provide a full explanation for those radio transmissions. This information will be used to determine what action to take in this matter.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth

Compliance & Information Bureau

First, you need a sense of humor. Second, don't forget to turn in your license for cancellation and sell all of your equipment, since you haven't done anything for the hobby anyway, apparently.

So Burt, is that why your daughter is a ham? She has a thing for old white fat men?

She has not been on in 7 years. After at age 10 she figured out that ham radio was not so interesting.

Something else to consider Ken, why not start a group in your area that meets each weekend or whenever to operate a little 6m AM, before you know it the Heath Lunchboxes will get dusted off, guys will wire up mics for their old Gonset rigs and you'll make your own 6m activity. I've worked a couple locals but am thinking of doing the same thing.

I'm getting plenty thanks, did I appear angry?, not at all Burt I'm amused. You brag on and on about how your daughter dumped ham radio because it's boring and she hasn't been on in 7 years yet when she graduates high school she's the first in line for the money. You don't find that amusing? Damn I think I'd hide my head in shame, but not you, I guess you figure since you "put up" with all the old fat white men for a few years you should be entitled to a few bucks eh? I'm just trying to figure out if she hasn't been on the air for 7 years and assuming she graduates this year then she hasn't been on the air since 5th grade. So at 9 or 10 years old what exactly did she do that would earn her a ham radio scholarship?

their rewards. K5ZU is dead, and K5BLB is about to be shutdown by the FCC! See the article at:
http://homepages.go.com/~wikk3/hollings.htm

Now their ringleader, and most vile of lyers is next. He was their leader and instigator, KK7HO, Tim Volz.

Volz is the jammer that pioneered the tactic of squatting on 3.950 just before the net starts every week. Then he refuses to move. Knowing that the net is coming in a few minutes, he then plays the victim, and attempts to paint the net participants as jammers.

A clever tactic, but it doesn't work.

Typically Volz will answer messages like this, calling it
"lies" because it's true. He will change the title, so others who reply to his rants will unknowingly repropagate his changes in the header.

And finally, he will play the victim, in an attempt to reverse the roles, and confuse the uninformed. It's a tactic that Volz uses over and over again. But it's getting pretty old.

So I'm counting the days until KK7HO is off the air,
like his lapdogs, K5ZU and K5BLB. Good bye Tim!

I have deemed it impossible that there would ever actually be a ham on Third Watch; the characters are in motion too much.

When the cop got the day old doughnuts I thought he was going to give them to a ham club he was a member of, but it turned out he was giving them to Mantooth the dalmatian.

Further, if there's ever an actual scene of a ham talking on the air, I'll eat my "deluxe Kenwood hat", being offered free with the purchase of a rig with "yesterday's technology today at tomorrow's prices."

It is very clear in the US as well. The sale, possession, and operation of linear amplifiers which are capable of operation in the 27Mhz Citizens Radio Service are ILLEGAL to/for any individual without the proper class of amateur radio license (Tech-Plus or above.)

Possibly. But by doing this, he also excludes those who are or will soon be new to the hobby. The radio being auctioned here is a Radio Shack HTX-242. This would be a perfect "starter" radio for a new ham. This guy, however, would refuse to sell it to him because he does not yet have his callsign. It's this kind of attitude (among other issues) that's causing our hobby to slowly die and go the way of the spark gap transmitter.

> Even if he _does_ believe it, however, he's far from alone in >that erroneous belief. Take a look at the "What can we do about licensed >hams who openly sell illegal amplifiers to CB'ers" thread in this >newsgroup for an example.

No argument there. It's downright scary how many licensed hams believe that unlicensed individuals can legally possess HF amplifiers. Worse are the ones who know it's illegal but have no problem selling them to unlicensed individuals.

Now, to those who will call me a hypocrite because I approve of radio but not amplifier sales to unlicensed individuals, I offer the two following reasons:

1) It's the law
2) A soon-to-be ham will need a radio to use when he gets his callsign. He does not immediately need a 1.5KW amplifier.

While we're on the subject, does ANYONE make a mounting bracket for multiple radios that will fit over the transmission hump?

What I am envisioning is a metal "rack-type" mounting apparatus where 3 or 4 radios could be "stacked" vertically and mounted in the area between dash and seats. A strong, sturdy mount that would attatch permanently via sheet metal screws to the car floor above the transmission...completely covering the "hump." Something like this would provide a neat, custom installation for all my equipment.

Come to think of it, what do the cops use to mount their multiple radios? Since I drive an early 90s Mercury Grand Marquis (dimensionally equivalent to a Ford Crown Victoria), I'm thinking whatever works for them would work for me as well.

Who sells and/or custom-builds these things?

Though I no longer have a catalog I do recall seeing several types of Almost all procedures hams use on CW came from the maritime bands, from prosigns and pile-ups to the "dit dit" at the end of a QSO. You'd

Howdy,

New content is being added this week. Check out the SWL links, the DX news, or the Propagation Center.

I've moved the QSL and Callbook section off of the main page and onto a page dedicated to just this information. And I've added a lot more to this section.

So, come on by and check out my non-commercial SWLing/Ham Radio website. The URL is http://hfradio.org and features DX information, including QSL Route/Manager Lookups and Callbook Lookups; a Propagation Center including my eAlert service (allows you to sign up with your email address. Then the eAlert system will send you email propagation reports. I use this with my pager.); Equidistant Azimuth Map software (allows you to create maps of any QTH); Swap and Shop; Bookstore (I've hand-picked over a thousand book titles on radio, etc.); Free website space for YOU to create your own Ham or SWL site, and there's more. Easy to navigate. Open for suggestions.

If you feel up to it, after looking around the site, drop me a note (you'll find my address on the site) and share your thoughts.

50.4 is the "AM" calling frequency. The ones you listed are for SSB and FM. Yes there is a mode other than SSB and FM. Also 28.4 is "TEN" meters, not SIX.

I can understand you not wanting to renew your license but why suggest that others do as well? How could anyone else not renewing possibly effect you?

I'm looking for the firmware chip, version 8.2, for a Kam Plus (not a Kam or other model, please). It must be like new, and NOT a copy. Did you buy the chip and then not use it? If so, I'm interested, but obviously it must be less expensive than buying it from you-know-who.

Thanks in advance.

This is one of the most ignorant statments I've ever heard. I suppose the thousands of QRP rigs sold over the last few years all all being used by hams who are not enjoying ham radio? Clearly you have no concept of what the hobby can offer.

Yes, ham radio would be so much more enjoyable if we were all just like you.

About 20 years ago, ARRL used to sell an L/C/F calculator device. There were two different versions -- a slide-rule type and a big round type. Modern technology has passed them by, so they are out of production.

For whatever reason, the ARRL Lab does not have any of these and would like to include them in the ARRL Tech Library.

If anyone has either of these devices that they would like to part with, please email me at the ARRL Lab.

Hello,

I am trying to build an amplifier, and I am working on the COR part of the amp. This amp will be operating at 2 Meters 146 MHz.
I am using the COR section from a 10 meter amp to use in my amplifier. It says to use a 22 uH RF Choke.
But, that would be at 28 MHz, so what rating would I need for it to be used at 146 MHz???

I would really appreciate some help here if possible.
I can E-mail you a picture of the schematic, so that you can see what I am talking about.

If you can help me, please E-mail me.

Shame on me but I usually monitor 50.4 (am) or .525 (fm) and don't call unless I hear some activity. I'm normally on the SMART 147.14 when I'm out and about but have not been on in the last 6 weeks or so due to travel. On 6m I have 4 watts AM into a vertical while I can normally work at least into Detroit you may indeed not hear me on 6m without a decent antenna outside. I am currently working on a 6m AM rig from a Communications Quarterly issue, I have two other friends who got thiers finished much quicker than I and have had some success with them. It's a 2 watt AM transciever. I'd be happy to get an AM sked going with anyone in the area.

Don't know any of these but then again I'm never on the Southfield but occasionally check the Useca.

When I was growing up I had opportunity to listen to some awsome stations coming out of Texas and California. These guys ran KWs in the shack just as exciters for the 5 or 6 more KWs in the basement or attic.
But the station that impressed me the most was a guy in Montana working an Australian using a single 6AQ5 for a transmitter. Claimed 3/4 watts AM. The rig was as wide as the old triplett meters and about 1/2 again as high. No it was not CW, he used a mike. Guess that ruined the story for some.

Two of the most vile amateur radio criminals have received their rewards. K5ZU is dead, and K5BLB is about to be shutdown by the FCC! See the article at:
http://homepages.go.com/~wikk3/hollings.htm

Now their ringleader, and most vile of lyers is next. He was their leader and their mentor, KK7HO, Tim Volz.

Volz is the jammer that pioneered the tactic of squatting on 3.950 just before the net starts every week. Then he refuses to move. Knowing that the net is coming in a few minutes, he then plays the victim, and attempts to paint the net participants as jammers, while urging his week minded followers to jam the net in earnest.

A clever tactic, but it doesn't work.

Typically Volz will answer messages like this, calling it
"lies" because it's true. He will change the title, so others who reply to his rants will unknowingly repropagate his changes in the header.

And finally, he will play the victim, in an attempt to reverse the roles, and confuse the uninformed. It's a tactic that Volz uses over and over again. But it's getting pretty old.

And all of this, because Volz disagrees with the content of the discussions on 3.950, and therfore opposes free speech, by disrupting the communications there.

So I'm counting the days until KK7HO is off the air,
like his lapdogs, K5ZU and K5BLB. Good bye Tim!

NEWSLINE 1154

Newsline report number 1154 for release on Friday, September 24th, 1999 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The FCC says that broadcast content rules apply to ham radio and it may use them to take a New Mexico ham off the air. This story and a wrap up on Hurricane Floyd on Newsline report number 1154 coming your way right now:

(Billboard Cart Here)

THE FCC vs. K5BLB

The FCC says that a New Mexico ham could loose his license for a variety of alleged offenses. In a case with what some are already claiming to be filled constitutional overtones, the FCC says that Sidney Mahan, K5BLB, kept interfering with other hams while using the wrong kind of language on the air. Now it may want Mahan off the air for good. Newsline's Paul Courson, WA3VJB, has more from Washington:

At first glance it looks like a simple crackdown on somebody using dirty language on the ham bands. But the FCC is apparently determined to use this case a broad guideline restricting the content of amateur conversations that some may consider profane.

The target of the enforcement action is Sidney Mahan, K5BLB, of New Mexico, who allegedly has interfered with hams participating in the controversial Liberty Net on 75 meters. The FCC notified Mahan in recent days that it may put his station license up for review at a revocation hearing. The agency also says that it may suspend his operators license for the remainder of its term.

Mahan allegedly ignored an earlier warning from the FCC to change his style of operation and conform with all of the FCC's rules governing the Amateur Radio service. The warning from November of last year cited questionable activities linked to Mahan operating on 75 meters, at around 3.950 MHz.

The warning letter suggested that Mahan was causing deliberate interference by making transmissions which included audio recordings and sound effects. Regulators say that here it is nearly a year later and enforcement staff continue to get complaints about activity allegedly coming from Mahan and his K5BLB.

The agency cited the use of profanity, obscenity, broadcasting extreme racial slurs, deliberate interference and failure to properly identify. Content issues get an unusual amount of emphasis in this latest letter to Mahan from the FCC. The agency suggests that Mahan may not understand the Commission's enforcement of a ban on obscene or indecent transmissions as it may apply to the Amateur Radio service.

The letter presents the FCC's opinion on the legal definition of obscene, indecent or profane language and cites a federal statute to back its claim that such material is outlawed on ham radio or anywhere else on the airwaves.
The statute is Title 18, Section 1464, of the U.S. Code of Federal Regulations.

FCC representatives have long suggested verbally that regulations from one service can be applied to any other service, but this is thought to be one of the first times that the FCC has taken the obscenity statute -- traditionally applied to broadcasters -- as part of an enforcement action against the Amateur community.

By inference, the letter suggests that if it can't be said on television or by radio's Howard Stern, it can't be said by a ham radio operator either.

The enforcement structure of designating a license for a revocation hearing is the same process used when the FCC moves against a licensed broadcaster. Only this time the call letters are K5BLB.

Regulators say that they have notified Mahan that they will be sending him some tape recordings made last month of on-the-air reception for his review. The recordings allegedly capture Mahan questionable operating. He is supposed to explain just what he is doing as heard on the tapes. Depending on his explanation the FCC will them move ahead to settle or prosecute its enforcement action against him.

>In Washington D.C., reporting for Newsline -- I'm Paul Courson, WA3VJB.

At airtime, its unknown what response Mahan will make to the governments challenge. (FCC)

THE FCC vs. Ronald Coursey

And a former California ham who refused a retest has again been warned to stay off the air. Lou Ann Keogh, K-B 6-H-P, reports from Sacramento:

Last June 18th the FCC ordered Ronald R. Coursey, N-6-U-U-M of Sacramento to appear for a retest before the July 30th. This, at the bureau's Hayward California office.

Coursey, then the holder of a Technician Plus class Amateur Radio license elected not to show up. As a result, on August 3rd, the Commission canceled his ticket and ordered him off the air. At that time he was also warned that continued operation of any Amateur Radio transmitter would be a violation of the Communications Act and could lead to criminal prosecution.

Now, the FCC says that it has evidence that Coursey has been operating radio transmitting equipment on VHF and UHF repeater systems in this. Also, that these transmissions were made after his license was terminated:

"Mr Coursey was an operator on the K7IJ repeater. We had cancelled his license because he failed to show up for a re-examination order. We have some allegations that he was still on the air and we issued a warning notice in regard to that complaint ad we warned him of the possibility of an in reim seizure of radio transmitting equipment."

That was the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth and in a sternly worded September 3rd warning Hollingsworth tells Coursey that any further incidents of unlicensed operation will result in enforcement action being taken against him.
Hollingsworth says that the unlicensed operation of any radio transmitter is a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934.

>In Sacramento California, I'm Lou Ann Keogh, KB6HP, reporting for Newsline.

Hollingsworth has also ordered Coursey to call him immediately to discuss the issues in the case. (FCC, RAIN)

LICENSES CANCELED

Three hams in Puerto Rico have lost their licenses after failing to appear for retests. Back on July 15th, the FCC notified Jose E. Perez Triana Jr., WP3BW, Gilberto Otero, KC2DUL, and Rafael Huertas, N3ZUT, that each would have to sit for a retest under the supervision of the FCC Office in San Juan. Each was given until the end of August to complete the retesting process.

But the FCC says that none of the three appeared for the mandated re-examinations. As a result, on September 8th the FCC notified Triana, Otero and Huertas that their licenses had been canceled. They were also warned that
Communications Act and would lead to criminal penalties. (FCC)

FCC TO STEP UP 10-METER ENFORCEMENT

The FCC's Legal Adviser for Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth says hams can expect more rigorous enforcement on 10 meter issues next year. Hollingsworth told visitors to the Shelby Hamfest in North Carolina that the next area of enforcement would be the encroachment of unlicensed individuals into the 10-meter band and a crackdown on illegal RF amplifiers. His announcement drew loud applause from the Shelby crowd. Hollingsworth elaborated on the comments in a recent interview A-R-R-L Audio News concerning this and other enforcement issues.

"We're coming on to ten months of rejuvenated amateur enforcement now, and two issues are clear--two areas we need to really crank up on next year. One is the incursion into 10 meters by unlicensed operators--CBers and so forth. The other is sales of illegal equipment on the Internet and at hamfests."

Hollingsworth told the crowd that he'd spotted more illegal equipment at Shelby that he'd seen last May at the Dayton Hamvention. You may remember that at the Hamvention, FCC Field Office personnel from Detroit warned several vendors about potential violations relating to the advertising or merchandising R-F amplifiers capable of 11 meter C-B radio operation. (FCC, ARRL)

HAM RADIO vs HURRICANE FLOYD

Amateur radio was ready for hurricane Floyd. That's what many relief agencies are saying now that the storm has blown out and clean-up efforts are underway. But at the height of the storm it was ham radio that was there when all other lines of communication were blown away. Rick Lindquist, N1RL, of the ARRL Audio News has the final chapter on hurricane Floyd.

Ham radio volunteers along the East Coast from Florida through the New England States put their personal lives on hold for several days to volunteer for Hurricane Floyd duty. The huge storm, which sparked the largest mass evacuation in US history, caused a cascading series of Amateur Radio Emergency Service and Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service activations, starting in Florida and moving steadily northward. After sweeping ashore early Thursday, the by then fast-moving storm pushed past New Jersey and New York into New England and began to dissipate. The storm cleanup and recovery have begun.

The Hurricane Watch Net on 14.325 MHz was activated and remained on the air much of the week, gathering storm-related weather data as the storm passed over the Bahamas and made its way to the US shoreline.
Information gathered on the net is funneled to forecasters via W4EHW at the National Hurricane Center. Net participants also were among the first to alert the rest of the world to initial damage reports from the battered islands. Many SKYWARN nets also tracked the storm's progress for regional forecasters and kept an eye out for possible tornado activity.

The Bahamas may have borne the brunt of Hurricane Floyd. Marty Brown, KF4TRG/C6A in Green Turtle Cay described extensive property damage to the Hurricane Watch Net. Operating from batteries, she said there was significant tree damage in many areas, as well as roofs blown off, boat docks severely damaged, and power and telephone lines down. Brown collected reports from other hams via marine radio nets in the islands, including a report from Man o' War Cay that some two dozen vessels were aground there. Road damage--some severe--also was reported. Damage in the Abacos islands was said to be substantial.

"Oh, man, what a day!" Brown said as she took a moment to catch her breath.

Hurricane Watch Net participants and controllers were hampered by less than ideal propagation. Several other Bahamian stations also passed along damage reports. Nets in the Bahamas were handling emergency and health and-welfare traffic on 40 meters. A health-and-welfare net has been established on 14.262 MHz as well.

In Florida and Georgia, many of the ARES members activated were assigned to handle communication duties at shelters housing the thousands of evacuees ordered out of coastal counties deemed most likely to be affected by Floyd. Dozens of ARES and RACES teams throughout Florida and Georgia were pressed into service to provide shelter communications and to staff emergency operation centers and assist outside relief agencies such as the Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

"Luckily, Hurricane Floyd realized Georgia was very well prepared for his arrival, so he turned and remained far enough offshore to cause no significant damage to Georgia," said Georgia SEC Tom Rogers, KR4OL.

As the storm progressed, ARES and RACES activated regional nets on HF and, in some cases, VHF. The FCC declared voluntary communications emergencies for HF and some VHF repeater frequencies in several East Coast states.

Georgia ARES not only made use of HF nets but of the Internet. "The Georgia ARES Reflector was a key tool in the dissemination of factual information and pre-planning instructions," said SEC Rogers.

"Not every operator in the ARES program has HF capabilities."

North Carolina still is reeling from the storm's effects, and the state has been declared a disaster area. At week's end the Red Cross still had more than 200 shelters open in North Carolina. At one point, some 41,000 people took refuge in North Carolina shelters. More than 620,000 residents were without power. North Carolina Section Manager Reed Whitten, AB4W, said that he was glad that the storm did not plow further into North Carolina than it did. Fifty one counties had activated their local EOCs due to Hurricane Floyd.

Downgraded Thursday to a tropical storm, Floyd continued to move rapidly toward the northeast. High winds, heavy surf and higher-than-normal tides were reported along the coastline from New York's Long Island and northward into Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts. Heavy rain generated by the storm caused some local flooding. Downed trees and tree limbs and some power outages were reported in New England. Among other activities, hams in New England staffed weather-spotting nets on VHF to keep abreast of the storm's progress and any substantial damage or difficulties.

VIRGINIA FLOYD HAM RADIO

During the height of Floyd's onslaught ham radio was not only a supplemental communications link in one south east Virginia town -- it became the only link . Again, Newsline's Paul Courson, WA3VJB:

Hurricane Floyd took Franklin City Virginia off the map for a while. Flooding by Thursday night had wiped out the towns Emergency Operations Center and destroyed conventional communications with the outside world.

Ham radio operators from the Williamsburg James City RACES Group came in to help. Setting up third-party traffic and having licensed hams as control operators, the little town finally got back in touch with an anxious Emergency Operations Center at Richmond -- the state capital -- which was then able to relay damage assessment and coordinate urgent needs requests with the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Washington.

Wiliamsburg James City hams helped maintain the 2 meter - '76 repeater which turned out to be the only remaining link capable of carrying traffic between Franklin City and Richmond. Thanks to a history of public service, the repeaters antenna has long held the position at nearly the top of a large communications tower in Williamsburg.
Its battery back-up during a widespread power outage kept the system running even after commercial two-way, cellular and paging networks had gone down.

The group on Thursday night handed the repeater over to emergency officials who used it for word of bridges washed out, hospital needs and status for the Surrey Atomic Power Station on the James River. Communications had still not been restored well into Friday the 17th of September as the clean-up and rebuilding began.

NORTH CAROLINA UPDATE

This is Chuck Martin, KD6NUJ, with a report from Greenville North Carolina. While the greater portion of Eastern North Carolina escaped damaging winds from hurricane Floyd, the wrath of the torrential rains -- totaling over twenty-five inches -- in combination with hurricane Dennis just two weeks earlier -- has created severe flooding of the Tar River in this area.

Hams immediately began providing communications for the county Emergency Communications Center, Red Cross, the local hospital and the evacuee centers. The hams relayed health and welfare, medical and related information.

With two county wide power losses, the only communications kept open was via ham radio. The second power failure was expected to last for several days, but was restored within twenty-four hours thanks to the hard work of the utility crews.

Once again, tactical planning at shelter sites, emergency generators and car batteries paid off, providing as smooth an operation as could be expected in this kind of a disaster.

I'm Chuck Martin, KB6NUJ, near Greenville North Carolina, also apologizing for not being able to provide Newsline in RealAudio on the T.A.P.R. Internet website. I will resume normal posting as soon as telephone service is available

CONGRESS TRYING TO LIMIT NWS ACTIVITIES

Even with the aftermath of hurricane Floyd, congress is considering legislation that would effectively prohibit the National Weather Service from providing some rather vital services. Under the terms of a bill making its way through congressional committees, lawmakers are looking at banning the N-W-S from providing any service that can be made available by commercial forecasting companies.

The October issue of C Q V H F magazine reports on H R 1553, also known as the National Weather Service and Related Agencies Authorization Act of 1999. The magazine says that the measure has already been passed by the House of Representatives and is currently awaiting Senate action. Among its provisions is a section that restricts the National Weather Service from competing with private sector forecasting businesses. It states that the National Weather Service shall not provide or assist other entities to provide a service if that service is currently provided by, or can be provided by commercial enterprise. The only exceptions are so-called vital weather warnings and forecasts for the protection of life and property of the general public and those services required by international aviation agreements.

According to Maricopa Arizona Emergency Management Director Bob Spencer, this legislation will effectively bar the N-W-S from providing the public or other government agencies with weather watches and storm tracks, routine fire weather reports, telephone consultations to emergency management personnel, meteorological briefings to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, private pilot weather briefings and even specialized weather services for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The measure would also impact negatively on Amateur Radio emergency services including the National Weather Services Skywarn program. (CQ VHF Magazine)

HAMCON T-HUNT FORUM AND HUNT

One of the biggest West Coast t-hunting forums will take place over the weekend of October 2nd and 3rd. This in conjunction with the 1999 A-Double-R-L Southwestern Division Convention. Joe Moell, K0OV, has the details on this fox-hunting extravaganza:

Mark your calendar for the first weekend of October and plan to be at the ARRL Southwestern Division Convention (HamCon-99) on the Queen Mary in Long Beach, CA.

The T-Hunt Forum at 10 AM Saturday will cover all aspects of RDF contesting, with an emphasis on on-foot hunting, ARDF, radio-orienteering, and ROCAs. There will be plenty of stories and photos from the recent IARU Region 2 ARDF Championships in Portland, Oregon.

Plan to stay for the full day Sunday, because HamCon/Foxhunt-99 will take place Sunday afternoon at a site that's just a short ride away from the Queen. This will be an all-on-foot hunt, designed to be fun and a challenge for both beginners and experts alike. There will be separate divisions based on age and experience, from pre-teens to Old Timers. You may choose to hunt as an individual or in a team of two.

If you have never gone on a foxhunt before, take this opportunity to give it a try. If you're a champion, come and defend your title. See you there!

IOTA DX AWARD

In D-X, there is a new Islands on the Air Award to ring in the new century. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, has the details:

A new operating activity award for the year 2000 has been announced by the RSGB's Islands on the Air Committee and CDXC, the UK DX Foundation. The IOTA Millennium Programme, known as 'IOTA 2000', will be administered by CDXC on behalf of the IOTA Committee. The object is to contact as many different IOTA island groups as possible on the HF bands within the year, starting on the 1st of January 2000. Two types of contact count for credit;
'normal' contacts, and 'premium' contacts made during particular months and which score extra points. No QSL cards are required. The full IOTA 2000 rules and a list of island groups, including the months when premium scores are made, can be downloaded from www.cdxc.org.uk

Again that website is www.cdxc.org.uk (G4NJH)

In other D-X news, PA3AXU says that he will arrive in Samoa early morning local time on September 28th. Hr says he that he will be active using the new P-S-K-31 mode and hopes that the Pacific propagation will allow at least some low band activity, although he will not be taking an amplifier. Activity will last until October 14th. (OPDX)

And Zed-S-5-B-B-0 hopes that he will be operating a station from the shores of Lake Malawi from December 19th to the 26th. Edwin mentions that he doesn't have a callsign as of yet, but he has been told it could be 7Q7BB or 7Q7B0. This will be an S-S-B only operation on 10, 15 and 20 meters. Q-S-L information will follow shortly.

THE VERY FIRST SOS

And finally, from the Newsline history file, word that the ocean liner Arapahoe was the first US ship to use the radio distress call S-O-S. The ship, finding itself in trouble off the coast of North Carolina on August 11, 1909, sent out an S-O-S signal that was received by a nearby ship.

Contrary to popular belief, S-O-S does not stand for anything in particular. Rather, the three letter call was adopted as an international distress signal because of its easy transmission and interpretation. (ARRL)

Hi,

Electric Radio issue 99 has a nice article on what you seek. The mod uses a 6BE6 as a combined BFO and product detectro. This could be easily adapted to your radio. If you don't want to use a minature tube, an equivalent full size tube could be used. My SP600 had been modified that way and works quite well on SSB.

XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX Suggestion: Use a transformer with several 'one to one' ratio windings to couple the speaker outputs and ensure that the output circuits of each equipment do not have any DC connection, only audio.
You never know, even if one equipment was switched off that if the speaker circuits were connected directly together, DC could feed back from some other equipment and damage the output of the the switched off equipment.
Also some speaker output circuits might/might not be connected to the chassis potential of vehicle etc. so direct connection of out put circuits could be 'potentially' (pun intended!) damaging.
You are only dealing with 'voice' frequencies (300 to 3000 hertz etc.), so the transformer could be fairly low quality. Even one designed for 60 hertz would prob. be OK to isolate voice frequencies.
Might be easier to use a seperate speaker?
BTW please let us know what you eventually decide is your best solution.
Regards.

Fortunately, Tim's weak signal renders him harmless in most areas. When K5-BLAB starts his droning monologues, there's really not much you can do but wait until his smoke-infested lungs give out and he has to take a breather. But Timmy is simply background noise. In my area, the Net goes on as usual and nobody really pays any attention to him.

I live on top of a hill with a mile long very exposed power line . In 8 years, I have lost two expensive TV sets and a water pump controler to lightning strikes. These TV sets have no power transformer and sit right across the 120 Vac line. The power cable to my submersible pump is about 500 ft. long and picks up the lightning surges like an antenna. Thunder clouds that build up to the west of my QTH nrar Algonquin Park in Eastern Ontario find an easy dischargs path on open farmland. In order to protect my computer, I installed a Back-UPS Z 80 standby power source and lightning protector from APC. This device saved the day twice this summer by absorbing very large lightning surges. Trouble is the thing puts out annoying harmonics that drifs up and down the 20 Meter band. Very similar to the sync birdies put out by older cheap ac-dc TV sets. If I was to look at the power out waveshape of the device, I would probably see an aproximation of a sine wave. A pure sinewave would of course put out no harmonics. These harmonic are hard to live with especially on 20 Meters. Anyone have a solution?

I've got a product detector design that uses an NE602 chip. The transformer that you need is a Toko RMC 502-182. The Digi-Key part# is TK1305-ND.
Unfortunately, I don't have a scanner; otherwise, I would be able to send the schematic file to you as a gif. I am not sure where you are located, but e-mail me if you would like to pursue this option. I have been using this design in my own radios for the last 3 years, and it works great!

It is important to bear in mind that a circuit which is good for one receiver is bad for another, BC342 and BC348 are dissimilar in this way, for some receivers a heptode (6SA7, 6BE6, 6BA7) will work, while others require triode-hexode/heptode like 6K8 or ECH81/6AJ8, I have drawn a suggested circuit (gif format) for AR88 which requires the latter solution, a similiar circuit is planned to be tested in SP-210/BC-779 using ECH35 or 6K8

it is two possibilities of which I prefer the first:
1. You replace the octal based tube with plug-in octal plug mounted with a noval type socket with and extra components for minimum rewiring under chassis

2. You change wiring inside the receiver, but it is more work to restore it later.

I don't recall hearing you on the air. I'm located in Madison Heights MI (14 mile road and Intrastate 75). I have a Yaesu FT-847 I just got new and I am working on a 6m antenna. The problem I have is that I live in a ground floor apartment with zero outside access like a balcony etc. So currently I work just 2m and 70cm using a high gain (4.5 dbi on 2m and 7.5 dbi on 70cm) vertical antenna inside the apartment. When I'm on the air I'm talking with a few other friends on the Southfield repeater (146.820MHz, negative offset and a pl tone of 131.8 Hz). Sometimes you can catch me on the Detroit repeater (444.000 MHz positive offset and no pl tone required). The Detroit repeater I have keyed up with a received signal of S9 as far north as Oxford MI. I'm on the air normally around 5:30 PM, during the week, either at home or operating mobile on my way to night classes at LTU located at 10 mile and Northwestern Hwy.

Some of the other people you may know are Larry KC8GTR (my brother), Bill KB8UFQ, Harold KC8GTS, Greg KC8KRR. My brother is looking for some 6m activity too.

(N2SAG's letter to Riley)please note while reading this that K5MVK was not the one that even sent in an affidavit but yet....well read on.

Mr. Hollingsworth,

By your recent actions in reversing the fortunes of WA9KJI and W1WCR =
you=20
have, in effect, labeled the many honest witnesses to the May 1st incident = on=20
3.950 MHz as "LIARS". The ARRL report only mentions an affidavit. The=20 identity of the author of that false affidavit has been discussed openly = on=20 the air. Considering the past co-violating activities of WA9KJI and = your=20 witness we might have figured it out anyway. It now seems clear that you = are=20 relying on the untruthful affidavit of a notorious violator to destroy = a=20
truly decent Ham radio operator and institution.=20

Did you know that:

K5MVK has likely been jamming the "Liberty Net" with Morse code for = several=20 years with a repetitious, "REPENT, REPENT, REPENT"?

K5MVK has openly and regularly maliciously interfered with the "Liberty
Net"=20 and others on 3.950 MHz in concert with K5BLB in voice mode for at least = one=20
year?

K5MVK wrote a letter to you condemning the music playing and jamming of
K5BLB=20
and subsequently declared him a paragon of decency when he decided that
=
he=20
was angry at BLB's antagonists?

K5MVK engages in nightly, illegal CW broadcasting on our about 3.950?

K5MVK has been WA9KJI's co-jammer on countless occasions, usually = pretending=20
not to be able to hear preexisting QSO's?

Mr. Hollingsworth, the character of your witnesses matters. My sworn=20 affidavit will be an honest account of what happened on May 1st. I = have=20 offered to appear in any court in any venue to testify that WA9KJI was=20 calling CQ over an ongoing QSO when control of 3.950 was legally transferre= d=20 from W3KE and AA8DP to W1WCR and the net. I have never jammed, and = never=20

knowingly involved myself with anyone engaging in such behavior. =20

Forgetting for a moment about May 1st., both you and Mr. Hickman know = very=20 well that WA9KJI has been a notorious violator. His self-identified = tape=20 playing, noise making, obscenity and slander are well known to the = entire=20 amateur community. What does it say about the character of K5MVK that = he=20
would be prone to associate with and defend such a notorious miscreant?
=20

Ironically all that K5MVK has really done is admit that he momentarily = joined=20
WA9KJI in jamming N3GVA and KR4LY (now N2BUB) earlier that evening. =
His=20
affidavit is in reality a confession of his own serious violation.
His=20
testimony on behalf of David Castle is analogous to a criminal testifying= =20 that his partner couldn't have been guilty of jaywalking because at the time=20
they were both engaged in robbing a bank!

A truly neutral party has come forward to clarify the events earlier in
the=20
evening of May 1st. when K5MVK apparently joined WA9KJI in talking over
=
an=20
established East Coast QSO for a period of time. This witness took=20 contemporaneous notes and heard WA9KJI verbally attack N3GVA and N2BUB = when=20
he called CQ over them and was informed that the frequency was in use.
=20
Shortly after that K5MVK engaged in his usual tactic of acknowledging =
Mr.=20
Castle in order to assist him in talking over an ongoing QSO between = people=20
he dislikes.=20

Mr. Hollingsworth, if you are still really interested in hearing the truth = in=20
more detail from a centrally located vantage point, please call: = WD4CIA=20
WALTER H. PHILLIPS JR, 104 MEADOWPOINTE E, HENDERSONVILLE TN 37075, at=20
615-264-2758. He is not affiliated with any faction. My sense is that = he=20
might actually give K5MVK the "benefit of the doubt" regarding direct=20 knowledge of the ongoing East Coast QSO due to band conditions. As I=20 understand Mr. Phillip's perceptions of the event there is no doubt = however=20 that WA9KJI was well aware that the frequency was already in use. It is my=20
=
opinion that K5MVK's previous pattern suggests that he also knew.

The FCC warning letter to K5BLB alludes to an incident taking place on Friday August 13th. What did K5BLB do on the 13th that caught the FCC's attention?

Its about damn time the FCC finally warned K5BLB. I've been hearing his jamming, music playing, profanity, and bullshit for years and years!! I hope the KK7HO 'plays in road, and complains about the cars'

Tim Volz's (KK7HO) argument that he has ownership of 3950 is like a child that plays in the road, and then complains about the traffic.

His logic is something like this:

I go to the same spot on highway to play every night.
When I get there, I don't see any cars, so I sit down in the middle of the road and start speaking about my views.

Then cars come along, and since I was there first, I ain't going to move. I was here first, damnit. Nobody can make me move. Those cars will just have to drive around me.

Maybe I can get some other kids to come here and sit with me in the middle of the road. How 'bout it BLB?

It's just too bad that the 'cars' on 3950 can't run over KK7HO. But he understands this, so that's why he continues to harass other hams.

Why would the fact that the "characters are in motion" have anything to do with the inclusion of ham radio in the TV series? Only a small fraction of hams are physically disabled or members of the "couch potato" set. Is this just another reflection of your obviously bitter attitudes concerning ham radio, such as your statement about new ham rigs having "yesterday's technology today at tomorrow's prices."? To me, ham radio simply represents a stimulating way for people to experiment with the wonders RF technology and propagation. Why are you denigrating an innocent hobby? It's not a job or a lifestyle -- it's a hobby!

Lighten up.

Wonder why "Jail Dale" don't get a cw tape, go to the pawn shop and buy back the boom box that his son hocked, and learn the code.

I heard he has been busy making trips to jail to see you know who again.

Sad story, goes directly to jail , does not pass go, passes gas , does not pass the iicense exam in front of fcc and forfeits his ham

Shortage of jammers strains Navy, Marines- Hams Recruited

September 26, 1999
Web posted at: 12:27 PM EDT
(1627 GMT)

WHIDBEY ISLAND NAVAL AIR STATION, Washington (AP) -- In the stifling heat of Saudi Arabia, Cmdr. Woods tried to cool his jets until June 22, the expected end of his squadron's duty on 75 and the start of a family vacation after returning to Whidbey Island.

It was not to be: The order came for Woods to join several disgruntled hams for service, an indication of how stretched the Pentagon is in some combat specialties -- electronic warfare, in Woods' case. "Sometimes there just aren't enough of them," says Cmdr. Arnold.

Angry hams are the military's only source of airborne jammers of both radar and communications. They are essential to ensuring the safety of the Clinton Administration and communist forces like the Russian-made Janet Reno.

With the advent of stealth technology in the 1980s, the Pentagon figured it would have less need for jammers because the new-era fighters and brawlers were to be virtually invisible to enemy radars. That has not proved true, however, as the air war on 20 meters this year showed.

"Stealth works a lot better" if it is supported by jamming, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Michael Ryan said.

In the meantime, the Navy is sinking hundreds of millions of dollars into a major upgrade of the Amateur Radio Service to give it new more powerful jamming. The Navy also is bringing back into the active fleet some of the pains it "retired" earlier this decade. There are 96 jammers now, and the Navy expects to raise that to 104 by the end of the year. Just a few years ago they were only on 80.

Good question Mr. Getback: I looked into the FCC database and the callsign WB2OTK does not exist. For your information this call is open and can be applied for. I recall a couple of hams who were sanctioned by the FCC and if my memory is correct this was one of the callsigns. If you get a copy of the Rain Report or the ARRL enforcement log you will see the callsign WB2OTK . Seems that he ran into problems with enforcement of the FCC. There was another ham who ran into problems with the FCC and was ordered for retesting before the FCC examiner. I recall that callsign as KE4TEW, but that callsign does not exist in the FCC database. Does anyone know why ????

Thanks for report on the status of Porkbutt and Ke4tew. It seems they are no longer lawful operating call signs. They must have been real bad to run afoul of the FCC. From my understanding, the FCC gives every miscreant a change to clean up his act. It looks like these two were hard core outlaws. As they say "Crime does not pay" so we will see if they reissue those calls to responsible people who will not use the hambands as a vehicle to cause trouble and boost there ego.

I used to listen to wb2otk when he would bragg and boast all night about his knowledge, money , and his being able to afford eating very expensive foods and living in a cathedrial ceiling home.. There was one Canadian who had a background of bootlegging who could listen to him shoot hot air all night. There were others too, most of them had criminal backgrounds, with criminal famiies who had been or were being arrested on moral charges or shoplifting, etc. By the various law enforcement officers in their home area. One of them even said he was a lawyer. Of course he was not. The bragging and telling tall tales was just normal among his apostles with Porkbutt. He had one defunct dentist among his starry eye listeners too.
Thanks for the info.

Answer: NOTHING.
The question should be re-phrased to read
1) What did the liberty net lie about this time?
2) Is this another case where they "falsely" complain something has occured?
Only to find out later that the evidence doesn't corroborate their complaint.
As was the case in the complaint of WA9KJI, Dave Castle.

Does anybody know if there is a downloadable 2-meter repeater directory that is map-based as opposed to tabular? What would be really neat is if it could be used as an overlay on one of the popular mapping programs (DeLorme etc.) and done to the scale you wish.

It would also be nice if you could stratify the directory and select, for example, only those repeaters that have autopatch, or only those that have emergency power, and so forth.

I just got the new ARRL directory, and it is complete and all that, just a pain to use if you don't know where "Hooter Junction Mtn." is.

No, it is not available. There is a two-year wait from the time a callsign

Hello, I am selling a preassembled Ramsey FM-25A FM Broadcast Band transmitter. I had it professionally assembled (by my father, who is an electronic technicion) but VERY rarely used (I bought it and then soon realized that I didn't have the time...) It has about 15 minutes of transmit time on it ALL TOGETHER (unit was bought 8 months ago). Comes complete with everything it ships with, instructions, schematics, spare parts, etc. Transmitter currently set to 99.7 MHz, but of course you can easily change it to anything in the FM band (using DIP switches) from 87.5 - 107.9 MHz. I am located in PA and will ship anywhere in the 48 states. I am looking for BEST OFFER. Please email me if you are interested. Thanks for reading.

Or the $10,000 to pay when the FCC finds you. They've been coming down pretty hard recently on unlicensed FM broadcasters as of late.

hi,

I was told people here may help me with that. I'm sorry if this is the bizillionth time you see that question posted.

So, in short, my FM reception in the car is gone while AM is fine. Is it antenna or some wire somewhere? What routine would you recommend to fix the problem.

Thank you very much.
Denis

(the car is mitsubishi eclipse '90, antenna seems to be okay, but I don't know how to test it really.)

There is no "routine" fix Denis, the AM and FM radio are typically two completly different circuits sharing the same audio amp, you'd have to open the radio and start poking around tracing the signal. Unless you have some experience with this I'd say dump the radio and get a new one unless it's very expensive then I'd consider having it fixed.

thanks for replying. I however think that the problem is in wires or antenna, because I have the very same another radio/stereo (from my previous car) and when I put it in, I have the very same FM reception problem. (so it's got to be something in the car besides the radio itself. I need some kind of simple guidence I guess on how to eleminate that piece of wire/equipment that is malfunctioning.

Thanks a lot for help.

The best way to overcome the code is to practice, learn the letters and digits at the same time. Start with the following letters, E I S H T M O. All of these letters have something in common. There are many aids in helping learn the code, but a code test given by the FCC may vary from the test given by a VEC.

For all would be hams and retesters, the Sony Boom BOX is compatable with regular cassett tapes. This equipment will allow for one to practice the code if one needs the practice. Alamo pawn shop or Cash America pawn usually has a good supply of these units. So go get a Boom Box and listen to the code, who knows, one may get good enough to pass the code test.

Hello

A new software shareware of count of Qth locator under Windows98 (version 32bits).
The software permits the count has the aide of Qth locator or some geographical coordinates the position of a station. He gives like results: the distance, the azimuth of the antenna, the geographical coordinates, the QTH Qth locator, the country, the city.
One could see on a geographical map, the position of the station with possibility of zoom. He possesses a data base also with all the capitals, and country of our old planet as well as the prefixes of the radios amateurs (possibility of modifying this data base)
You could see the software and download the version shareware has the

The "missing" is public safety. There is no way government agencies in that area are going to allow a bunch of people to run around chasing horses. The reason is obvious - they simply don't have the resources to rescue these people when they get into trouble (the resources are already being used elsewhere).

Having said that, I do agree that government agencies go way overboard in trying to protect people during, and following, disasters. Let me give an example. In Myrtle Beach (SC) following Hurricane Hugo, much of the town was totally undamaged following the storm (the major damage occured within one or two blocks of the beach).

In spite of this, police set up roadblocks nearly ten miles inland from the beach and residents who evacuated were kept out of the whole town for several days. And once people were allowed to return, there was a night curfew for several more days after that.

The result was a huge financial loss for the whole town. Day shift workers were unemployed for several days, and many who worked the night shifts were out of work for more than a week. For many of these people, the loss of income was far more damaging then the storm itself.

Given the sparse info you first provided, Tim gave a very good answer. However, the fact that you have tried another radio is significant (and should have been added to your first post).

Okay, lets start off with the obvious. The antenna is not likely to be your problem - it is shared by both AM and FM in a vehicle sterio system. In other words, if AM works with the antenna, then FM will probably work also.

Next, we have to assume that both of the radios you tried are working (there is always a slight possibility that both are bad).

We also have to assume that you are operating the radio correctly. Have you tuned through the band to insure that no radio signals exist (don't rely on the memories - especially if the car battery has been disconnected lately). Is the volume turned up? Are the balance and fader controls set correctly? Are you hitting the right button to switch to FM? And is there any other button that might affect FM reception.

After that, we can start looking at the installation. How is the radio installed in the vehicle? What wires are present? What jumpers exist in the back of the radio? Is there a separate amplifier? How many speakers are present? Of course, the brand and model number of the radio would also be helpful.

The more information you provide, the more likely it is a solution can be found.

Ok, then try this. If the situation is similar between two radios we'll make an assumption that they are working and the antenna may be the problem. (more detail gets you a better answer) Wire the radio in a fashion that you can work with it outside of the car or wire it and leave it sitting where you can access the antenna jack. Now unplug the car antenna and stick a piece of wire into the center part of the antenna jack, strip one end of a 10' piece of wire, take off about 1" of insulation, any wire will do but not too thick, maybe 16-18 awg?
twist up the strands of wire (if stranded) , then fold it or bend it so it fits snug into the center part of the antenna jack. Strip only enough to make contact but not enough to short to ground you wont hurt anything but you wont get any signal if the wire touches the case or the grounded part of the antenna jack. If you can't get it to stay in just have a friend touch it to the center while you perform the next test, you'll have an answer in a matter of seconds. Now tune AM and FM is there a difference in reception? If yes, then replace the car antenna as there could be a short somewhere allowing the low frequency of AM to trickle through but shunting the higher VHF freq to ground thus killing your FM reception.

Good luck,

Apparently your the only one who cares. One would think that since he's not on the air he couldn't possibly be bothering you but it seems whether he's radio active or not he'll be the everlasting object of your facination. Try building a homebrew rig or working the satellites, maybe a new mode. It might help you take your mind off him for a few hours.

No I am not one of his "suck boys" but you sure have a "nut" for Herbie. This man is a criminal, a know it all, and one egotistical jerk. I believe he will lose his license in October and then we will not have to listen to his bull shit.

Also when you learn to spell and construct sentences so people can understand what you are asking then get back on this news group and be more intelligent. When it comes to composing a message you really need to learn sentence structure and spelling.

If you really listen to both Herbie and OTK you will see that they act the same. Both individuals have head problems and both need to be off of ham radio.

Sounds like a dry run for when martial law is imposed after all hell breaks loose on 1/1/2000 as a result of Y2K.

Thanks for reading this message. I recently purchased a Kenwood TS-690 SAT as well as a 6 Meter Loop antenna. I live on the 10th. floor of a condo complex and have a terrace. MY problem is that I cannot hear ANYTHING on 6 meters. Going from 50-54 mhz is nothing but dead air. I hear a bit of static in the FM mode and pretty much nothing in the other modes. Am I doing something wrong? I live in westchester in New York. I managed to hear some packet activity at 50.073 but thats about it. Generally what mode should I be in AM, FM SSB? Is it better in the day or the night? Are there any web sites that may educate me?

Thanks

I'm troubled by his reaction too, but I also have tangled with a linear-powered CB'er who was using a kilowatt plus on channel 1. He was as foulmouthed as the rest of them, and since he was transmitting AM, every word came through loud and clear on just about every electronic device in my house. I did eventually get some help from the FCC, but it would have been much better if he had been unable to get the linear in the first place. The ham who's selling these things online is probably breaking the law (Part 97 is very clear on what you can and can't do with linears for 10 meters!) but is certainly making matters worse for the rest of us.

Great Curt, And that is the way it is. It is a hobby and those involved are in it for their own reasons which may not coincide with anyone elses. Who cares. I asked a radio control flyer about his love of flying and he said, "naw, I like the smell of oil and gas mixed. Turns out this particular "ham" is currently under FCC scrutiny for violations concerning his 2-meter repeater system. Yet he continues to openly market illegal amplifiers. Real smart.

I'm also seeing several instances of licensed amateurs marketing amplifiers to CBers on eBay and other online auction sites. Details to follow...

If the license is reinstated, then it's up to the FCC as to whether they'd give back to him his original callsign. But that call won't be available for anyone else, either through Vanity or

Hi all;

Once in a very rare while I sell off equipment that just isn't being used. If you knew me, you'd know that EVERYTHING I own is absolutely functional, clean, and kept in a non-smoking, humidity controlled environment.

Here's the list, get it while you can...

Kenwood TS440SAT 80-10 Transceiver, with internal automatic antenna tuner, SSB and Narrow CW filters, computer interface chips, broadband transmit enabled, hand mic, power cable, SP-430 speaker (upgraded), and includes perfect original Operations AND Service manuals. This is the sweetest little rig you're likely to use, and has regularly earned outstanding signal-quality reports. Full output, 100% operational. Cabinet is free of damage, with only very slight wear around the front outer edges. Super receive audio, too, typical of Kenwoods. $750 or BRO, worth every penny.

Kenwood TH79A Dual-band HT, 2m plus 440, 5 watts out. This is ABSOLUTELY like new, less than 1 hour use. Comes with new original high-output battery (PB34), plus new additional NIMH PB33 style battery, Kenwood 2-slot KSC-14 fast charger, MFJ lapel speaker/mic, soft case (new), original box and manual. I paid over $550 for it recently, will sacrifice for $350. Check with your local toy store; the options ALONE are worth almost that much.

TR-44 rotator with control box, mast mount and manual. Just back from the Rotor Doctor, it's been fully refurbed, lubed, cleaned, repainted and checked out; it looks new. $155 or BRO.

Heath SB610 Station Monitor, clean, fully operational, well built. This is a sweet monitor, with a nice bright trace, and plenty of controls. A steal at $110, includes manual.

Heath SA 2060 Legal Limit Antenna Tuner. This is Heath's "top-of-the-line" tuner, and one look inside will tell you why. Well built, like new, no scratches, works perfectly. Dual-meters, easy to adjust, supports coax, ladder-line, and end-fed antennas. Includes manual. $195 or BRO.

InfoTech M200F RTTY/CW Terminal Unit. This is from a day gone by, but it still kicks butt for RTTY/CW when compared with any of the newer "better" multi-mode units. It requires an external composite video monitor, works really great. Looks and acts new, includes manual and cable. $125 or BRO.

All of the equipment is guaranteed to be as described, you have my word of honor. I prefer postal Money Orders or Certified or Bank Checks, I ship same day via UPS.

Thanks, and I look forward to hearing from you!

Thomas, it was a spoof strawman organization set up in order to thwart discussion of the NPRM. It never really existed except in the mind of Eric June, the founder. Once Cecil declared that he was pro-code, the
"org" fell apart - absolutely no reason for being at that point.

Matt, you are absolutely correct. Although you'll probably get Flamed for your posting, (because people hate it when the truth is told), one has to understand that this NG is a direct reflection of the hobby itself, which will ultimately decay into history. Every club, organization, or hobby has a vocal minority which sets the stereotypical tone for the entire rank and file. This NG is amateur radio's vocal minority.

Many people (Hams) cannot understand why young people do not desire to pursue the amateur radio hobby, when in fact the answer to their question is blatantly obvious. I give the young people today credit for having the ability to understand when they are getting bamboozled into something that they really don't want, because this was a luxury that most of the people of my generation didn't possess.

As I looked at the NCDXF beacon monitor (HAARP has been running experiments after 0000 z the past several days) it occurred to me that the strong signals I thought were overloading the spectrum analyzer centered on 14.1 were not alone, if one then looks at the 1-30 MHz waterfall.

Extremely strong (-60 db, likely greater) signals are present at sporadic intervals- which match our bands.

http://www.haarp.alaska.edu/haarp/cgi.data.fcgi

I hope the Navy isn't using our bands like an RF dumping ground, most are EXCLUSIVE.

They have their own to go play with. Did we not fight this fight before and after WWI ?

M-120 and GM300 use the same software.
Both use the same cable as the rest of the Maxtrac family. You also need a RIB to hook between the PC and the radio. Converts RS-232 logic levels to TTL. See http://www.batlabs.com for details.

Your counter-argument is grossly flawed. It's easy to prevent the manufacturer or importation of amplifiers easily modifiable for 11m.
It's not so easy to prevent drivers from drinking or guns from killing innocents.

There are already laws on the books prohibiting non-amateurs from building HF-capable amplifiers (S97.315a) and prohibiting the sale of home-built amplifiers to non-amateurs (S97.315b5). S97.315a even prohibits a ham from building more than one HF power amplifier per year without a grant of type-acceptance. Gotta love those "stroke

Hi all,

I have an old Tektronix 453 oscilloscope that has a bad HV power supply, and I suspect that the transformer may be the problem.

If anyone has a spare HV/flyback transformer for the Tek 453 that they would be willing to sell, please let me know.

E-mail me at:

dbutter@wireless.net

Thanks in advance!

I hope not. But, government agencies do go way overboard at times.
If there are any widespread negative results from Y2K, I could easily visualize local government agencies overreacting.

I doubt martial law will be declared (in fact, I think the whole Y2K issue is overblown), but there is plenty of room for government agencies of get out of hand even without martial law (martial law was not declared during Hugo, but local roadblocks and curfews were widespread).

I guess we'll have to wait and see what happens.

Man, didn't you know that JFK was Elvis. Elvis/JFK was discovered dancing naked on a vibrating bed in the White House singing "All Shook Up" to Marilyn. When the aliens heard about this, they decided he had to go.

However, there are rumors that he may have been put back on Earth as Dan Quail, but many think those rumors are false. However, stranger things have happened, so I'm keeping an open mind.

However, the story about the locusts is totally wrong. Those are actually black helicopters ferrying aliens back and forth between the mother ship in preparation for the final takeover during Y2K.

In fact, if you look real close, you can actually seen the little aliens waving out the windows of the helicopters. Many of them look a lot like Al Gore, except they are more animated. Perhaps Earth's increased gravity causes them to slow down.

What does all this have to do with ham radio? Who do you think is trying to take over all the ham radio frequencies? The aliens have to communicate, and the large number of them is creating a need for more bandwidth.

I hope that clears everything up for you, Gil. If you have any more questions, feel free to ask.

Hi all;

Once in a very rare while I sell off equipment that just isn't being used. If you knew me, you'd know that EVERYTHING I own is absolutely functional, clean, and kept in a non-smoking, humidity controlled environment.

Here's the list, get it while you can...

Kenwood TS440SAT HF Transceiver, with internal automatic antenna tuner, SSB and Narrow CW filters, computer interface chips, broadband transmit enabled, hand mic, power cable, SP-430 speaker (upgraded), and includes perfect original Operations AND Service manuals. This is the sweetest little rig you're likely to use, and has regularly earned outstanding signal-quality reports. Full output, 100% operational. Cabinet is free of damage, with only very slight wear around the front outer edges. Super receive audio, too, typical of Kenwoods. New Lower Price: $650 or BRO, worth every penny.

Kenwood TH79A Dual-band HT: Sold!

Timewave DSP-59+ digital signal processor, with version 3.0 firmware. Like new, no marks, amazing abilities. Includes manual and original box: $175. Really pulls them out of the "mud"; great for voice, CW and DATA..

TR-44 rotator with control box, mast mount and manual. The rotor is ust back from the Rotor Doctor, it's been fully refurbed, lubed, cleaned, repainted and checked out; it looks new. $155 or BRO.

Heath SB610 Station Monitor, clean, fully operational, well built. This is a sweet monitor, with a nice bright trace, and plenty of controls. A steal at $110, includes manual.

Heath SA 2060 Legal Limit Antenna Tuner. This is Heath's "top-of-the-line" tuner, and one look inside will tell you why. Well built, like new, no scratches, works perfectly. Dual-meters, easy to adjust, supports coax, ladder-line, and end-fed antennas. Includes manual. $195 or BRO.

InfoTech M200F RTTY/CW Terminal Unit. This is from a day gone by, but it still kicks butt for RTTY/CW when compared with any of the newer "better" multi-mode units. Works with your PC or an external composite video monitor. Looks and acts new, includes manual and cable. $125 or BRO.

All of the equipment is guaranteed to be as described, you have my word of honor. I prefer postal Money Orders or Certified or Bank Checks, I ship same day via UPS. I'll split the shipping with you.

Thanks, and I look forward to hearing from you!

If you have noticed, NGs in general bring out those with an

I'd like to give my point of view on this as one who is presently selling a perfectly good DSP 59+, having replaced it with the 599zx.

It's strictly economics versus features; I bought the 59+ not knowing what I'd do with it. It works super on Voice and on CW, and gives a credible performance on Data. Where it "falls down" is switching from mode to mode. In a word, frankly, it's laborious. You've got to twist knobs, and push several buttons to go, say, from Voice to Data.
Once you're there, however, it's great.

The 599zx, on the other hand, remembers whole combinations of settings, and you can click from one to another with a single button push.

So, it's up to the buyer. If you're constantly switching back and forth between RTTY, Voice, Packet, etc, then you'll probably get a cramp from the 59+.

If on the other hand you want to save a hundred or two, and the above limitation doesn't bother you, then the 59+ is super.

Jus my 2 cents.

Neil

P.S. My 59+ is STILL available, make me an offer:

is the smallest HF ant that I could use that might actually work?

I dont want something that looks to ugly as they might notice that and that is a bad thing.

Any ideas would be great. I am going to put a little 2m/70cm in a little storage thing I have off the the balacony so I dont have to use my duck ant and can get a 2m mobile. I was looking at getting a 2m all mode and use that to work some cw on 2m if I didnt have enuf space for hf. Any ideas would be great.

So you want to ban the sale of alcohol and weapons -- fine. But no one has suggested banning the sale amplifiers -- our only desire is to ban those which can be used on 11m.

Those laws are designed to protect the thousands of world-wide users of the HF spectrum, not to protect the operator himself.

You're apparently not aware of the vast difference between HF and VHF propagation. If you so much as sneeze on HF, half the world could possibly hear you, while running 1500W (the legal limit) in an improper manner on VHF would only bother folks on a regional basis (and tracking such a station on VHF is easy). (Where did you get the idea that 10 kW is legal?)

>Should we therefore prohibit the mfg of those amps--or just >prosecute the people who use them?

Prohibit the manufacture of 11m-capable amps, and prosecute those who build them.

That you believe that 10 kW is legal and that you can't see the benefit of having a single law protect thousands of HF users means that I'm finished with this QSO.

I can't comment on the "transverter aspect of the 775. I did get to run a demo 775, even though I was a FT-1000D owner at the time. The 775's receiver with DSP, can out perform the 1000, hands down, no contest. The TX audio, from the 775 is a bit less broad, but not by much. I'd love have one of these 775's , it's a outstanding rig, so is the 1000, but the yaesu, is old tech, outdated, but still a great rig in it's time. I.F. DSP is the wave of the future in radio, the 775 is one of the first to really use it well.

All it tells me is that many newer rigs have DSP built in and so a lot of the guys that had the money to go out and buy these units when they hit the market are now upgrading to newer rigs with built-in DSP and selling off the old rigs and filters.

I think that people are also realizing that audio DSP has it's limitations and that rigs with built-in IF DSP are far superior and will ultimately provide capabilities that cannot be performed with audio filtering.

7736. AutoFAQ Sent to Over 15,000 rec.radio.amateur.misc Posters

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.misc
Date: 1999-09-29 00:00:00 UTC
From: pschleck@novia.net Message-ID: <pschleck.938657353@oasis>
Source record: 130511

In September of 1996, I started mailing an introductory message to all posters to rec.radio.amateur.misc. This is accomplished via a special Perl script originally written by comp.infosystems.www.* FAQ maintainer Tom Boutell, who uses it on comp.infosystems.www.authoring.html, to send each poster such a letter once, and only once. It runs from a Unix cron job on my host every morning at 2 AM and queries my local news server via NNTP for the headers of any new articles posted to this newsgroup. About 15-25 new posters on average receive the message each day. Though substantially silent-running and low-maintenance, over those three years, the script suffered from two minor "oops" events:

1. Some as-yet undetermined file write error (possibly from a quota hard-limit on the system) truncated my previous-poster file to zero, and accidentally sent the message twice to a small number of recipients (essentially the posters of articles to rec.radio.amateur.misc in my local news spool on Friday, February 19, 1999).

2. A bug in Version 1.2.1 of the Typhon news server (installed by my ISP on or about April 3, 1999) which caused "References" instead of "Reply-To" headers to be returned when requested by the script using NNTP protocol, thus addressing the automated welcome messages to Message-ID contents. This mildly annoyed one postmaster who redirected to his mailbox all E-mail addressed to his domain, but with invalid mailboxes (e.g., the numeric, pseudo "addresses" used for Usenet article Message-ID headers).

In both cases, the problem was easily diagnosed, fixed, and enhancements were made to the script to ensure that the problem would not happen again.

Here are the milestones in terms of number of recipients, and the date each milestone was attained:

Recipients: Date: Average Recipients/Month (approx.):

0 September 21, 1996 N/A 5,000 July 5, 1997 625
7,500 December 7, 1997 500
10,000 June 2, 1998 420
12,500 December 20, 1998 420
15,000 September 29, 1999 280

Note that the rate is tapering off (likely following an exponential saturation curve).

Here's a breakdown of recipient's reactions to the letter over the last 36 months. All feedback was politely replied to, usually with a version of the rebuttal arguments given below:

About half of one percent of all recipients strongly objected to it. Spamming and junk mail seems to have rubbed sensibilities raw with regard to receiving unsolicited, possibly automatically-sent, E-mail; also, there's obviously just no pleasing some recipients, including the one person who angrily replied that he did not ask to be welcomed to this newsgroup (sigh!). Two others (out of the 15,000 recipients), accused me of illegal "spam" and threatened to have my account, my ISP, and possibly my ISP's upstream connection if necessary, "permanently removed from the Internet." Since this didn't happen, I can only assume that these threats were disingenuous (Hint: If there truly is a problem, please let me know about it, but I cannot constructively respond to misrepresentations, insults, and threats). I choose to endure this occasional abuse because experiences in other newsgroups demonstrate such automated welcome messages to be "just barely redeeming" in terms of dealing with the massive influx of new users.

Another half of one percent thought it was a bit wordy (the message needs to be "one size fits all" and some recipients might be very confused without some background explanation; the message attempts to get to the point as quickly as possible, and some careful pruning and rewording of the message has helped reduce complaints, but pragmatically the message is also optimized to minimize the amount of followup correspondence I have to engage in)

A handful of recipients complained that they did not post to the newsgroup (they did, usually by following up to a crossposted article in another newsgroup). In this case, the message was at least useful to warn users about such unintended crossposting. I note that the number of recipients in this category has reduced dramatically over the past year (such that I can't remember the last time I received such a complaint).

A handful of recipients didn't read the entire message, or didn't understand it, and asked to be taken off the mailing list (of course, this isn't a mailing list, and removing their address from my database would have the opposite of the desired effect). One person even asked to be removed from the database anyway, stating that he never intended to post to the newsgroup again (I honored his unusual request).

A handful of recipients pointed out that they had been participating on the newsgroup for many years (It's possible that if you haven't posted in the last three years, or posted but the article didn't reach my local news spool, that you could potentially get this new user welcome message the next time you post. However, you will certainly not get it more than once.)

About one percent complimented me for sending it (which I appreciate).

The overwhelming majority did not respond, indicating one of several possibilities:

- they approve of it
- they disapprove, but not enough to bother replying
- the mail was misdelivered (I got a few bounces, often from deliberately munged From: or Reply-To: addresses to ward off "spam"; I've also recently begun to notice a number of readers registering with blocking or filtering services provided by DejaNews and others that prevent them from receiving reply E-mail)
- they don't care

So, my impression is that the project is at least a qualified success, and should continue in its present form. At the very least, it seems to be substantially non-controversial. Having primed the previous-poster database with over 15,000 E-mail addresses, the chances of bothering an experienced reader with an unneeded introductory message is greatly reduced, and will get even smaller with time.

I'd be interested in hearing your opinions on this project. I'd also like to solicit volunteers to initiate similar projects in some of the special-topic newsgroups (perhaps starting with my previous-poster database as a baseline, and modifying the message to contain pointers to the more topic-specific FAQ's and information; the .digital.misc, .homebrew, .equipment, and .policy newsgroups seem to be good candidates for a project of this type).

For those who are curious, here is the current version of the message, slightly modified in response to feedback as the project progressed.

Subject: WELCOME to rec.radio.amateur.misc
Newsgroups: rec.radio.amateur.misc
X-Loop: rec.radio.amateur.misc-auto-faq@oasis.novia.net

Hello,

This E-mail message is automatically sent to every new poster or cross-poster (as of September 21, 1996) to rec.radio.amateur.misc (and its associated mailing list, Info-Hams). It should be sent once, and only once, to each unique E-mail address. As the subject says, this is a welcome message. The Internet amateur radio community welcomes you to the newsgroups, including rec.radio.amateur.misc, and welcomes your input, opinions, and constructive participation. To help make you feel welcome, experienced participants like myself have chosen to systematically inform you, as a new poster, about useful information resources and user tips to help you get the most out of these newsgroups. I hope that you will consider this message in that spirit.

Please note that this is a one-time mailing, not a mailing list, and the presence of your E-mail address in my database prevents you from getting the message again the next time you post. Because of this, a request to "take me off of your mailing list" would not only not make sense, removing your address from my database would actually have the opposite of the desired effect (where you would be considered a first-time poster the next time you posted, and get the message again).

The majority of the original content of the FAQ remains the same, but now it's a hypertext document with hundreds of links to radio-related sites and is a significant resource to all students of amateur radio - regardless of their license status. It may be accessed as a WWW Page:

http://people.ne.mediaone.net/wd1v/hamradio.faq.html

It is also available in text form. Send an message to John's E-mail address below with the words "HAM FAQ" on the subject line.

3. The Amateur Radio Elmers Resource Directory is an excellent supplement to the FAQ as it's a directory of "Elmers" (mentors, experts, and gurus) for amateur radio who can answer questions via Internet E-mail and via the various resources (such as special-topic FAQ Lists and WWW pages) that they maintain. It is accessible both as a WWW page:

5. The rec.radio.swap FAQ: A Guide to Buying and Selling on Usenet, also originally written by Jay Maynard, K5ZC, is now also maintained by Jeffrey Herman, WH6U. It contains a number of good pointers for reading and posting articles concerning the buying and selling of radio and radio-related equipment on the USENET newsgroup rec.radio.swap (which, with the sole exception of rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors for vintage equipment, is the only appropriate forum for such articles). (They also have information about amateur radio organizations in other countries.)

7. Read the newsgroup first to see if your question has already been answered. You may also view, and search for keywords in, older news articles (going back to March of 1995) at the DejaNews archive:

http://www.dejanews.com/

Many topics have been discussed before, often in great depth, but the articles have expired from your local news server. Services like DejaNews allow Usenet a much longer "institutional memory" that can greatly benefit both new and experienced users.

8. If you do post to the newsgroup, give as many details as possible. After you post, read the newsgroup for a week or two to see all replies to your posting. If you wish, ask for responses by E-mail and offer to post a summary if others are interested in the answer to your question. Note that it is (almost without exception) inappropriate to post your article to all (or even a significant subset of) rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups. Please pick only the most relevant newsgroups (usually no more than 2 or 3), and post your article as a simultaneous cross-post (check your newsreader documentation) so that only one article is propagated, and the article is only shown once in a newsreader.

9. Remember, USENET newsgroups are based on the idea of mutual aid. USENET only works if we put as much into it as we get out of it. Good luck with your experiences with amateur radio and the amateur-radio-related USENET newsgroups.

You use the audio in/out pins, and ptt pins per the ACC2 connector (+ground) from the 4 wire PK232 connector. You run a cable from the FSK and ground pins on the back of the 232 to the RTTY jack on the back of the 950. This assumes that the 950 is the same as the 850. You then must use the "FSK" mode on the front panel.

Will you PLEASE open your eyes and re-read what I wrote?

How will such a ban be enforced? You yourself said that government doesn't have the manpower to go after every lawbreaker. They can't even stop cellular-capable scanners from coming into the country. All someone has to do is go into Canada and by one, where there is no ban. (At least there wasn't one two years ago. This may have changed) I'd like to see these amplifiers disappear as much as anyone else, but realistically, it's not going to happen.
A "Stroke of the Pen" is meaningless without the muscle to back it up.

Great Going Jane!!!!!

Tapes are fine as far as they go but the best way is to just get on the air and have fun working CW. You will be surprised as to how fast your speed will build up and you will have a blast doing it. You will also get used to copying CW under not so ideal "canned" conditions so that the tapes will seem like a breeze.

Regardless of the flack you will hear from some of the lids on this news group there are plenty of folk to work on the novice/tech plus sub-bands. I would be glad to have some QSOs with you if you want to make a schedule just e-mail me.

Again great going. Hope to C U on the air soon.

Congratulations on upgrading your license. Put on your lid-repellant suit if you're going to post in here, though.
The Gordon West tapes took me to 15wpm relatively easily (except for one unfortunate mishap heh). I started not knowing any code at all and was at general within 8 months. The "step-up" to Advanced is very easy, so once you get to General keep going.

Hi,

Its a bit late I know, but I've just got my RadCom and they mentioned special event calls for JOTA.
I'd like to set up a JOTA station for my girls Brownies/Guides troop.

What do I need to do ?

Do I have to have a special event call ?

If I can't get a HF setup (I'm a B licencee) is there much JOTA activity on 144MHz ?

Thanks.

I have consulted (on an ongoing basis over the last 3 years) with my ISP, and their opinion on the matter is that my posting does not violate their terms of service. You pruned a key sentence from the start of the policy:

According to http://www.novia.net/acceptable/ (emphasis added),

"It is contrary to the Acceptable Use Policy of Novia for a direct customer, or for an Internet Service Provider customer to permit any third party, to use any Novia service, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of unsolicited mass transmissions or multiple or inappropriate postings in a manner which, IN NOVIA'S SOLE JUDGEMENT AND DISCRETION, is abusive, offensive, inappropriate or unacceptable." [...]

Note the words "in Novia's sole judgement and discretion." I have specific approval to undertake this project because of its redeeming value and public benefit. Obviously, no written policy can cover all contingencies, and discretion on the part of the ISP is sometimes necessary to determine the appropriateness of individual usage on a case-by-case basis.

It was obvious from the start that I would not be able to obtain total consensus for this project from the readers of rec.radio.amateur.misc. There will be a small, inconsolable minority with whom I will have to agree to disagree. I've asserted this before, and will do so again:

This project operates with 99.5% tacit approval, or at least lack of expressed disapproval, of the recipients.

0.5% of 15,000 is about 75. The number of negative complaints over the last 3 years is most certainly bounded by that number (I believe that it's bounded by 50, and possibly even 35, which would be approximately one per month). In terms of actual replies sent, positive replies outnumber negative ones by 2 to 1, possibly even 3 to 1, and I count messages like, "This is kind of long to read" or "I've been posting to this newsgroup for 10 years" as negative replies, so they're not all at the same level of objection.

Furthermore, though such discussion is certainly valuable and welcome, it's only because I've engaged in full disclosure on this newsgroup as to my project, its purpose, and implications (both positive and negative) that we are even having this discussion on the newsgroup at all. If there was tremendous hue and cry over what I was doing in the absence of my making periodic updates to the newsgroup, that would be one thing. Instead, what happens is that I get maybe 1 or 2 complaints in followup to my update message, and the thread quickly dies within a few days. Without such updates, this project is essentially invisible.

This project is not SPAM for the following reasons, some of which are common sense, some of which are legal (based on an informal opinion from a local lawyer with some expertise in Internet-related law; since this was just consultation and not a formal client relationship, take with the appropriate disclaimers).

- It is arguably not SPAM to send a response to a specific post, on a specific newsgroup, for a specific newsgroup-related reason, and do so one time to a given user. The automation is merely a means to an end, and does not, in and of itself, constitute SPAM. When you post to a newsgroup, you invite a reasonable amount of replies on topics relevant to that post and that newsgroup.

- The small number of messages sent on a daily basis (usually no more than 10-15) keeps it under arbitrary definitions of SPAM without even considering exceptions or discretion (usually 25, as in the Novia AUP).

- Unlike most all SPAM, the message is from a specific, real originator who reads and replies to all responses (if you write to me in reply to the message, I will get your message, will read it with interest, and will promptly send you a polite, considered reply). I realize that sending such a message invites replies, and I welcome them.

- The originator's ISP is clearly identified, and has a real address where you can direct any concerns and likely also receive a polite, considered reply.

- Inherent in this project is a "do not call" list. You are automatically put on it the first time you post, but can also be added to it at any time by writing to pschleck@novia.net.

and this one is the most interesting of all (told to me by the lawyer):

- SPAM by most laws and regulations aimed at it, is defined as having commercial content. While I believe that other aspects of the content and how its presented does affect whether it is abusive or not, in terms of most laws established to date, my message is arguably not SPAM simply because it is not commercial in nature.

7748. HELP!! Police motorcycle radio needed

I'm restoring a 1952 Harley Davidson police motorcycle and the only thing that I'm missing is the radio setup. I am interested in ANY pre 1970 police motorcycle radio since I can use it as trading material with the few other people in the country who are into this sort of thing. Specifically, I think what is correct for my bike is a Motorola FM TRU41. It is two boxes about 18" long x 10" wide x 10" high. (these dimensions are approximate) The receiver was in one box and the transmitter was in the other. The power supply was in one of the boxes also, but I'm not sure which one. There are interconnecting cables between the two boxes as well as a cable that went up to the control head mounted on the handlebars. The mic came from one of the boxes and was mounted on the tank. It is a tube radio. This is the one I need for my bike but am interested in ANY ANY ANY ANY pre 1970 motorcycle radio, especially if it has tubes. I hope somebody can help me.
Regards
Mark (mark@kelltech.com)

Kudos to you for responding.

However, why were there strong signals present at or around each amateur band, far stronger than what occurs when it's not running ?

Perchance the graph isn't entirely accurate as to the frequency, hence the appearance ?

I second the recommendation. Further, I got too bored by the tapes or computer programs -- not because of their repetitiveness, but because it was too much like work. Actually carrying on a live QSO with a real person is far more interesting and sustainable, and no method will get your speed up faster.

You'll find a range of people -- experience people who like to help novices along and will go at any speed you offer, and other new novice or tech+ hams who are doing just what you are doing. Get on and enjoy! and from time to time, instead of tapes, tune into the ARRL code practices; some go from high speed to low, others from low to high; you get a segment of English text (from some article in QST) and a segment of fairly random sounding stuff -- call signs and numbers from a score listing in QST. And the second you're tired of doing that, twist the knob and get back on the air.

Good luck!

More likely the proliferation of cheaply made consumer electronics goods. My retired neighbor just got on the Internet and his "white box" PC and Monitor (both made in China) radiate hash in my HF radio. This from inside his house, 100 feet from mine with his PC monitor and CPU next to his window in his above-ground rec room. You might want to see if the noises peak around prime time and drop off after midnite. Sure sign the RFI is man made from poorly designed cheap consumer electronics.

FCC Issues Stern Warning to New Mexico Ham NEWINGTON, CT, Sep 29, 1999--The FCC has fired a warning shot over the bow of a New Mexico ham who has been the target of complaints. The Commission notified General licensee Sidney W. Mahan, K5BLB, of Estancia, New Mexico, on September 15 that if the complaints about his operation continue, the FCC intends to designate his station license for a revocation hearing and his operator license for suspension for the rest of the license term, April 12, 2006.

Last November 18, the FCC had sent Mahan a Warning Notice concerning his operation on 3.950 MHz that allegedly involved tapes played on the air as well as sound effects and deliberate interference to other operators.

"We continue to receive complaints and monitoring information on the operation of your station, particularly regarding profanity, obscenity, broadcasting extreme racial slurs, deliberate interference and failure to properly identify," said FCC Adviser for Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth in the most recent FCC communication. In particular, Hollingsworth said, the complaints concerned alleged interference by Mahan to "a net that attempts to operate around 3.950 MHz on Saturday evenings"--an apparent reference to The Liberty Net.

In his letter, Hollingsworth outlined and defined FCC prohibitions against the transmission of obscene or indecent material and advised Mahan that, for indecency purposes, the FCC treats amateur transmissions "the same as commercial broadcasts."

In addition to threatening to take K5BLB before an administrative law judge if the complaints continue, Hollingsworth said the FCC planned to forward tape recordings of K5BLB on August 13, 1999, on 3.950 MHz and would request "a full explanation for those radio transmissions." Mahan's reply, Hollingsworth said, "will be used to determine what action to take in this matter."

As a gun owner who uses black powder in an antique rifle, I'd hate to see black powder outlawed. HOWEVER: I'd also hate to see a blister-pack kit marketed consisting of a pound of black powder, a fuse, a length of pipe and pipe end-caps. Such a product certainly invites misuse.

And a linear amplifier intended for upper HF with a required input drive of 3 to 15 watts will almost certainly not end up on the ham bands. Such a product will also invite misuse, especially since many CBers do dubious mods to their radios like removing audio limiters to aid in sounding overmodulate and in splattering. (Bleedover is a source of pride to some CBers.)

There you go, talking about the total ban on alcohol and weapons, while I'm discussing the ban on just 11m-capable amps, not all amps.

Nonsense. I'm referring to banning 11m-capable amps, not banning all amps.

Who's the "innocent" that would be using an 11m-capable amp?

>>Those laws are designed to protect the thousands of world-wide users

It's easy to ban the importation of easy-to-modify amps; banning them is a simple act and has an immediate beneficial impact on all the world's HF users.

See above paragraph.

Well, let's see what you wrote:

>>>build a 10,000 W amp for use ABOVE 144 and--if s/he wants to do so--jam

"10 kW, jam, won't be illegal." Want to bet that that "legal" amp would be confiscated?

>Should we therefore prohibit the mfg of those amps--or just Wouldn't bother me at all to ban 'em.

Thank the illegal users for such a restriction rather than blaming the government. But you can always get around that prohibition: Build an amp, and build a transmitter with the second amp contained within the xmtr.

>>Prohibit the manufacture of 11m-capable amps, and prosecute

Accept it. Our liberties are being eroded due to those who abuse

So you too have a problem with banning the importation of easy-to-convert amps? I'm lead to believe that you both have some financial interest at stake in regard to such devices.

Welcome to the Auxiliary Communications Service Newsletter, developed by the ACS Training Unit of the State of California Governor's Office of Emergency Services. Please visit our ACS Home Page at http://acs.oes.ca.gov

The purpose of this weekly newsletter is to bring those of us in emergency communications closer together by sharing common ideas, and by introducing new technology into the emergency services community. All individuals with an interest in emergency communications, disaster preparedness or helping the community at large are encouraged to participate here in an open forum.

You will find a virtual community here, with representatives from many different organizations with the same common goal: emergency response. We encourage everyone, from whatever organization you represent (or just yourself!) to bring us your ideas, suggestions, concerns, manuals, handbooks, or opinions so that we may share them with the group. To those of you who have just joined us, welcome aboard!

Greetings from Kearney, Nebraska, where I'm teaching a Crisis Intervention class at the Nebraska Emergency Services Coordinators Association conference. I'm still learning the ins and outs of email from a hotel room, so we'll be limited this week to a report from FEMA on disaster aid for Hurricane Floyd and this week's EMCOMM Bulletin. We'll have a full newsletter back again from California, next week. The Newsletter and Bulletin will be uploaded to the ACS Home page as soon as I get home, on Friday the 24th.

Emergency Aid Ordered For New York Hurricane Response

Washington September 18, 1999 - Federal resources and funds were made available today to support hurricane response efforts in New York State under an emergency declaration issued by President Clinton, according to the head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

FEMA Director James Lee Witt said the President took the action following a review of the agency's analysis of the state's expedited request for federal aid as a result of Hurricane Floyd, which hit the state on September 16.

Witt said the emergency declaration authorizes the agency to provide federal personnel, equipment, supplies and other materials as required to meet immediate human needs, protect property and public health and safety.

Additionally, federal funding will be available to the state and affected local governments to pay 75 percent of the eligible costs for debris removal and emergency services related to the hurricane, including requested emergency work undertaken by the federal government, in the counties of Orange, Putnam, Rockland and Westchester.

Eligible work undertaken by the federal government can include debris removal; search and rescue operations; temporary facilities for schools and other community services; demolition of unsafe structures; transportation of emergency workers, equipment and supplies; and other assistance to help alleviate immediate threats to life and property.

Witt, who designated the counties eligible for the emergency aid following the declaration, indicated that the need for additional forms of federal assistance will be determined after further evaluation of the storm's effects. He named Marianne Jackson of FEMA to serve as the federal coordinating officer the response effort.

This week's EMCOMM Bulletin: EMC202 State EMCOM Unit Funding 2/3
To: Emergency Communications Units - Information Bulletin
To: Emergency Management Agencies via Internet and Radio
By: Auxiliary Communications Service (ACS) of the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services

EMC202 State EMCOM Unit Funding 2/3 For release 9/20/99

Funding was accomplished by use of a Budget Change Proposal (BCP) submitted through the administrative chain in the CA Governor's Office of Emergency Services (OES), the agency that is responsible for the ACS program. The BCP was supported by the new OES Director, Dallas Jones, appointed to that position in January by the newly elected Governor, Gray Davis.

Government funding essentially 'goes by the book', so find out the exact procedure in your jurisdiction and follow it. Here is the general BCP layout we had to use.

A. NATURE OF THE REQUEST
- This is a request for funds to
(1) replace unrepairable failed equipment;
(2) enhance the service.......;
(3) strengthen ability of..... spell out what the unit does, but BE BRIEF in this part.

B. BACKGROUND-HISTORY
- Detail unit history, purpose, support from OFFICIALS
- Include reference to legislation that influences current needs.

C. STATE (OR LOCAL AREA) LEVEL CONSIDERATIONS
- State the risks to your state or local area
- We included this: "in the mid 1990's, for the first time, Computer Support was requested of the ACS, which was supplied by 3 teams with experience in computer installation, operation and setup. Today fully 80% of ACS activities are computer oriented."

D. JUSTIFICATION
- We outlined the threefold purposes of the State ACS program, which are education, training and operations. We said "Education includes familiarizing paid staff with the abilities of the unit, its participants, an understanding of unit benefits, as well as well as educating unit participants."
- Enumerate and clearly delineate all functions the unit does here. Ours said (among other items) that the ACS "supports the OES State Warning Center during an emergency."

The critical part of the BCP continues in Bulletin 203. It is the "Analysis of All Feasible Alternatives". Of those that will be covered, we were shooting for alternative three (3).

The overall result obtained funds that were used as follows:
- $96,000 purchased Amateur Radio HF, VHF and UHF equipment and accessories that will be placed in seven physical locations of the ACS serving the Governor's Office of Emergency Services.

Continues, next bulletin #203, next week.

Well, Jane first off congrats on getting your Tech+. It's a great feeling to get the 5wpm!

You will get a different answer from just about everyone you ask, so here's mine.

Get on air and work code. Get on every day, even if you only have a few minutes try to make at least one QSO a day. If you can't make a QSO, then tune around and listen to others. Try to copy them, and also tune into the ARRL's practice code. This is sent from 5 to 30WPM (somewhere around there), and is in plain text from back issues of QST.

Now that you have the code in memory, put the tapes aside. There good for learning the code, you've done that, now you need to sharpen you skills. The best way to do that is use it! But remember it takes time and don't rush it, it will come to you. On average most people move up to 15-18wpm in a year. (I say this because that's how it went for me and I'm about as average as they come)

There are plenty of people listening on the novice bands for new hams, we will slow down and help you along, so get in there call CQ and we'll find you. :-) If not, e-mail me a time/freq and I'll be more than happy to work you.

I neither support "HERBIE" nor "OTK" but I do feel that "SCUM" like

Keep printing the stupidity and let the whole world know what an HAARP does not operate in any of the amateur bands. The recent operation referred to by "mf_luden" was at 6.9 MHz, within the frequency range where HAARP is permitted to operate. The test was to measure the antenna pattern of the array and it used an unmodulated carrier.

The NCDXF and waterfall charts on our web site are produced using signals received on an antenna located less than a hundred yards from the HF antenna array. The amplifier chain in this receiving system has a fairly good dynamic range but is still susceptible to overload when the HAARP transmitter is in use. The harmonics visible in the charts on the web site are created within the spectrum monitor amplifier chain and the spectrum analyzer itself. They are not transmitted harmonics. The apparent broad spectral width is also created within the spectrum analyzer.

The spectrum monitor can be placed in a low sensitivity mode to avoid overdriving the analyzer. We have done so in previous operations. The result, of course, is that there is nothing else to see on the charts. All signals are attenuated equally, so the NCDXF and waterfall charts go blank.

We operate HAARP is strict accordance with the caveats given us by the NTIA. Those rules do not permit operation in the amateur bands and we abide by those rules.

Sincerely,
Ed K3NS

In the US it is perfectly legal for me (or any hobbiest) to build and own an RF amplifier capable of 10KW (or more) output from 1.8 to 30MHz, including the 11M band.

The FCC rules specify how I can use that amp, but as an individual I am not in any way restricted in what I build so long as I only build one of that model in a year.

An 11M-capable amp is not illegal for me to own or use, so long as I use it within the ham bands.

A 10KW-capable amp is not illegal for me to use, so long as I do not exceed the power output limits for the band-segment I am transmitting in.

OK "Mr Wonderful" I am sure the whole world waits for your opinion on everything. Funny you have time to post on here what with your name in the newspaper and on TV every day, You sound like a pompous ass who is carried away with his own self importance. I can tell a ego maniac in a heartbeat . I bet you don't have two pennies to rub together. I will have to place you on the shelf with Roger Wiseman as a internet thug and creep who tries to carve out success on a puny internet forum.

Mr Brewhead:

Correctomundo!! Keep up the good work,, We have a few slimeballs on here who echo "Dogtick " and try to be resident "intellectuals"..In reality, they are only unsuccessful "SUCKBOYS" hitching their star to the loudmouths, "PORKBUTT" and "DOGTICK". Carry on the good things you are doing, Getback... Herbie still here, Porkbutt gone!!
